Murders Blamed To Whittemore

"Candy Kid" Leader Is Charged With Six Ruthless Murders—Police Search For New York Jeweler.

New York, March 25.—With the police promising further revelations, Richard Reese Whittemore, the "Candy Kid" leader of a daring band of desperadoes, today stood accused of six ruthless murders. The gang, nine of whom are under arrest, are said to have stolen more than $1,000,000 in holdups in and around New York.

Members of Whittemore's gang are "squealing" and new disclosures are being made almost hourly.

Here are the murders that swarthy, dapper Whittemore is accused of having committed:

The slaying of Robert Holtman, 67, a guard, when Whittemore escaped from the Maryland state penitentiary, on February 13, 1925.

The killing of Charles Yarrington and George Clicord, two guards who died at the hands of gunmen in Buffalo, N. Y., on October 27, 1925, while protecting $93,000 in bank certificates. Whittemore was identified as one of the killers in this holdup.

The slaying of "Chicago Tony" Langrello in Newark, N. J., on January 13. Langrello was a former associate of Whittemore.

The killing of Joseph Ross, a former member of the Whittemore gang, near Elizabeth, N. J., last December. Ross was shot to death.

The murder of Simon Gilden, a former pal of Whittemore's, who was found shot dead near the steps of Trinity Church in New York.

New York police say the alleged crime record of Whittemore overshadows by far the deeds of the notorious Gerald Chapman.

The "Candy Kid" and his pretty young wife, Margaret Whittemore, known as "The Tiger Girl," are taking their plight calmly, however. Both are reticient. Mrs. Whittemore, when arraigned with other members of the gang on highway robbery charges, wore jewels and expensive clothes.

Police today were searching for certain New York jewelers who they say have disposed of a considerable amount of loot brought to them by the Whittemore gang. They expect to shortly bring about the arrest and indictment of several jewelers, one of whom has skipped the city.

Gunmen Kill Boston Patrolman

Boston, March 25.—An automatic pistol, abandoned in a stolen automobile, was the lone clue today in the widespread hunt for three daring gunmen who murdered Patrolman Frank J. Comeau, of Station No. 11, Dorchester, and then disappeared in the crowds of men and women leaving a Lenten service at St. Ambrose's Church.

The reason for the shooting down of Comeau, one of the most popular men in the Boston police department, is a complete mystery.

Comeau was on duty as wagon driver at the Fields Corner station shortly after 9 o'clock last evening when three men stopped in front of the wagon house.

Statements by witnesses are conflicting. Some say that Comeau was called out and was shot down as he reached the open door of the automobile, others say he recognized the men in the car as auto thieves and was attempting to arrest them.

The general concensus of opinion in police circles, however, is that Comeau, who has recently been on plain clothes duty, had incurred the enmity of certain criminals and that they drove to Dorchester in a stolen car seeking vengeance.

Will Report to Judge Hasbrouck

Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck has offered to receive the report of the grand jury Friday noontime as well as take the sealed verdict which will be handed up by the trial jury at that time in a negligence case which was tried before Judge Staley on the closing day of the trial term of the Supreme court. Judge Staley is now holding a term of court at Albany. By Judge Hasbrouck receiving the report of the grand jury, Judge Staley will be relieved from making the trip to Kingston Friday.

DR. FREDERICK SNYDER TO RESUME OFFICE PRACTICE.

Dr. Frederick Snyder, who has been seriously ill at his home on Clinton avenue, has sufficiently recovered to resume office practice.

Charged With Bootlegging.

Washington, March 25.—Prohibition agents early today arrested George L. Cassidy, 33, whom they charge with bootlegging. Cassidy, according to the dry sleuths, is the man who created great excitement around the house office building Saturday afternoon when he unceremoniously dropped a suitcase filled with bottles upon being challenged by one of the guards. He is credited by the dry officers with having a "distinguished clientele" in Washington, which includes social leaders, and those in official life.

Police Round Up Cake Eater's Gang

New York, March 25.—Believed by the police to have been implicated in twenty-five hold-ups and possibly one murder, nine young "Sheiks" and three younger "Shebas"—said by detectives to be members of the "Cake Eaters" bandit gang, were lined up for identification today.

A score of men and women, victims of recent robberies, filed past the juvenile array in the endeavor to identify some members of the band.

When police rounded up the gang in a rooming house, a veritable arsenal was discovered, together with much loot and black masks.

The youths have confessed to many crimes, it was said at headquarters. They informed the police that they launched their "crime wave" to get money to entertain their girls at the night clubs.

To Manufacture Artificial Ice

Ulster County Ice & Coal Corporation Has Erected Artificial Ice Plant at 478 Albany Avenue—Company Headed by Former Kingston Resident.

The Ulster County Ice and Coal Corporation, recently organized and incorporated under the laws of New York, has erected an artificial ice plant at 478 Albany avenue and about May 15 will commence the manufacture of Hygeia ice. The plant is constructed of brick, concrete and steel and is 96x136 feet. Artesian wells having a capacity of approximately 600 gallons of spring water per minute will furnish adequate supply for condensing purposes. In addition to the wells the company plans to use city water.

The new corporation is headed by A. C. Winfield of Rhinebeck as president. Mr. Winfield is a former resident of Kingston who resided on Abruyn street until he left Kingston about thirty years ago. In 1894 he became manager of the Foster Pump Works in Brooklyn and in 1896 he left that concern to become established in business for himself. He is a pumps and machinery specialist in artesian wells.

The other officers of the corporation are: Vice-president, E. V. Winfield; secretary, A. F. Winfield; treasurer, M. E. Winfield. Others connected with the corporation are W. J. Sayers, a merchant of Rhinebeck; Samuel Wolbert, who is in the real estate business in New York, and William Bichwit, also in the real estate business in that city.

The corporation is planning to commence the manufacture of artificial ice about May 15 and the plant will at first have a capacity of sixty tons a day.

There are no other artificial ice plants between Albany and New York, except on the east side of the Hudson river where there are two small plants.

In the advertising columns of The Freeman the corporation is offering for sale the unsold portion of 550 shares of preferred stock and 275 shares of no-par common stock in units of two shares of preferred and one share of common for $225 per unit. The corporation has established a temporary office at the Eagle Hotel.

Chicago Gangland Kills "Squealer"

Chicago, March 25.—John Lafferty, suspected of having furnished police with information that led to the arrest of William White, alleged leader in the International Harvester Company holdup, was shot to death as he lay asleep in his home early today.

Two men, who gained admittance to the Lafferty home by posing as police officers, committed the murder.

Less than 24 hours after White and Thomas Shupe, one of the bandit leader's lieutenants, were arrested and charged with robberies totalling close to $200,000, gangland has wreaked its vengeance on Young Lafferty, guilty, as they believed of the unforgivable sin of "squealing."

Police learned from Robert Lafferty, father of the slain youth, the details of the crime.

"I was awakened by a knock on the door," said Lafferty. "When I asked who was there, they said 'police officers.' Of course I hastened to let them in.

"They both walked to the couch where John was sleeping and without a word, pulled out guns and began firing. Then they walked calmly to the door and were gone."

By way of explaining a motive for the shooting the senior Lafferty said:

"Several weeks ago, Shupe, who was arrested with White, induced my son to ride to close with him. I suppose the White-Shupe gang thought John squealed to the police in a spirit of revenge."

Lumber Awarded Contract.

Frank S. Campbell, mason contractor of 159 Fair street, has been awarded the contract to erect a four family tenement house and a fifteen car capacity bridge at the Gold Coast Woodlands, Goldrick's Landing.

Kip's Motion for New Trial Denied

Judge Morschauser Denies Motion To Re-open Rhinelander Suit—Mrs. Rhinelander Allowed $12,000 Additional Counsel Fees.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., March 25.—Supreme Court Justice Joseph Morschauser today denied the motion by attorneys for Leonard Kip Rhinelander for a new trial of the suit for annulment of the marriage between the wealthy young New Yorker and Alice Beatrice Jones Rhinelander of New Rochelle, daughter of a Negro cab driver.

Justice Morschauser also allowed Mrs. Rhinelander $12,000 additional counsel fees. Her attorney, Lee Parsons Davis, had asked $25,000.

Isaac N. Mills, counsel for Rhinelander, filed briefs setting forth that the verdict should be overturned and a new trial permitted. He claimed the verdict at the trial several months ago sustaining the marriage was against the weight of evidence. At this trial, which was held in White Plains, Rhinelander sought to have the marriage annulled on the ground that his wife had deceived him as to her color.

Today's decision spikes the efforts of Rhinelander to efface completely the ties of a legal marriage.

The jury at the White Plains trial decided that Alice had not deceived her husband, and the judge's verdict was that the marriage should stand.

Soon after the decision, Mills filed briefs asking a re-trial. Lee Parsons Davis, counsel for Mrs. Rhinelander, followed with his written arguments that the verdict should be upheld, requesting additional counsel fees for Mrs. Rhinelander.

HOLD MALECRIA ON BANKRUPTCY CHARGE.

Chieti, Italy, March 25.—Despite his acquittal on the charge of murdering Giacomo Matteotti, the Socialist deputy, Augusto Malecria was still in prison today.

The authorities said they were holding him pending an inquiry into a charge of fradulent bankruptcy against him.

Giuseppe Viola, the other of the accused who was acquitted, has been released.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty for Amerigo Dumini, Albino Volpi and Ameleto Poveromo.

They were sentenced to five years, eleven months and twenty days in prison. The triumvirate took the sentence calmly. Four years of the sentence will be automatically remitted by the political amnesty provisions as they have already spent almost a year and nine months in jail. They have only a few months to serve.

TWO AUTOMOBILES CRASHED TOGETHER ON BROADWAY

This morning while Frank Elmer Herd of 136 Jansen avenue was driving his car east on St. James street and Joseph Krajewski of No. 64 Third avenue was proceeding north on Broadway, the two cars came together at the intersection of Broadway and St. James street. The Krajewski car was knocked over and the big traffic standard at that point was completely demolished. While both cars were also badly damaged none of the occupants were injured. The collision was reported at police headquarters where each driver blamed the other for the collision.

GUNMAN LOST NERVE IN ATTEMPT TO ROB BANK.

Strathroy, Ont., March 25.—Police are searching for an unidentified gunman, who today made an unsuccessful but spectacular attempt to rob the Royal Bank.

After binding and gagging a taxicab driver, the would-be bandit entered the bank, but lost his courage when the teller dropped behind the counter. In his excitement he shot W. J. Johnston, the manager through the arms and made his escape without, however, obtaining any of the bank's funds.

FUGITIVE CAPTURED AFTER PITCHED BATTLE.

New York, March 25.—William O'Connor 29, who escaped last October from Sing Sing Prison, was captured today after a pitched battle with police.

O'Connor served one month of his five year sentence left a dummy in his cell bed, crept through the ventilator, slid down a rope and vanished along the railroad tracks.

He was caught as he entered his room.

LESS THAN FIFTY LOST LIVES IN STEAMER FIRE.

Buenos Ayres, March 25.—First reports of the loss of life when the Brazilian River Steamer Paes De Carvalho caught fire and sank in the Amazon, were exaggerated, according to dispatches received here.

Less than fifty lives were lost, it is reported, although early reports said the total had been 100 killed.

The fire is believed to have been due to a careless passenger smoking in the distance.

Miss Edna Maniscalci, an experienced graduate of Spencer's Business School, has secured a permanent position as stenographer and office assistant with N. B. Green, jeweler, 20 Wall street, this city.

Kills Self and His Fiancee

American Medical Student Shoots To Death Dancer and Himself In a Taxicab In a Traffic Jam at Berlin.

Berlin, March 25.—Aroused to a murderous fury by her flirtations, John Goodrich, 22, a medical student of Monroe, N. H., early today shot and killed Alice Fitzner, 20, of Detroit, his fiancee, and then took his own life.

The shooting occurred in a taxicab in which the couple were returning from a restaurant where Goodrich had caused a scene by violently expressing himself on the subject of Miss Fitzner's alleged infatuation for a Russian dancer.

Miss Fitzner, who also was a dancer, had for some time sought to break the engagement with Goodrich because of her love for the Russian, police said.

Goodrigh and Miss Fitzner had been betrothed for some time and had planned to be married soon. Lately, however, they had both fallen into financial straits and arrangements for the marriage had lagged.

Several weeks ago the girl's enthusiasm for an early wedding disappeared when she met and fell deeply in love with M. Basiliieff, a Russian dancer appearing at the Grosses Schauspielhaus, a huge theatre built by Max Reinhardt, and at which Miss Fitzner was taking lessons in dancing.

Herr Rosen, director of the theatre, was enthusiastic about the talents of the Detroit girl, describing her as his most talented pupil, and promising to give her a star role in the near future.

The future was roseate for the young dancer until she met the Russian. She became cold toward Goodrich who, intensely enamored, smouldered until last night when he could restrain himself no longer.

The tragedy occurred while Goodrich and his fiancee were in a taxicab in a traffic jam, surrounded by crowds of people.

When the police arrived they found the girl with a wound in her right temple and Goodrich shot throught the head. Both were rushed to the Norbert Hospital where Goodrich died soon after admission, but the girl lingered and was able to tell of the tragedy.

Goodrich had been a student in the famous Charite Hospital where he had studied under some of the most famous German surgeons.

The girl was in the Quadrilla Schauspielhaus, a dancing class composed only of girls of extraordinary beauty. She was very popular in Berlin, having made a hit in a recent revue here.

H. H. Tyndale of Salt Lake City, a fellow student and chum of Goodrich, told the International News Service that jealousy could have been the only motive for the crime, as Goodrich had not been 'out of funds.

"John was terribly in love with Alice," said Tyndale, "Alice broke the engagement a year ago. When John returned from America recently, Alice told him that it was all over forever but wanted to be good friends. However John was sure he would re-win her. He believed that the lure of dancing had brought about the estrangement and that it would pass."

Goodrich was formerly a student in Syracuse, N. Y., Tyndale said.

Navigation Now Open to Kingston

Steamer Poughkeepsie, of Central Hudson Line, Had No Difficulty in Making Trip Through Ice Fields—Starts on Return Trip to New York.

Navigation on the Hudson river for the season was resumed Wednesday night when the steamer Poughkeepsie, of the Central Hudson Line, resumed trips for the season between New York and Kingston. The Poughkeepsie arrived in Rondout creek about 5 o'clock this morning and experienced no difficulty in breaking a track through the ice fields. The steamer left for New York at 9 o'clock, and will make regular trips between this port and New York every other day. She is due here again Saturday morning.

The warm weather and rain of the past few days has wasted the ice in the Hudson river to such an extent that the big steamer had no trouble in breaking a track. It is only a matter of a few days when all of the ice in the river between this city and Poughkeepsie will move out.

The Central Hudson Line has maintained navigation between Poughkeepsie, Newburgh and New York all winter and the big boats of the company had no trouble in keeping a track open.

There was a very large attendance and all seemed to greatly enjoy the jokes and musical selections. The show will be repeated this evening at the Auditorium for the benefit of the building fund.

Scott Arrested on Abduction Charge

High Falls Man Arrested at Newburgh on Charge Growing Out of Story Told by Two Girls—Held for Grand Jury.

Walter Scott of High Falls is in the Ulster county jail awaiting the action of the grand jury on a charge of abduction. Scott was arrested Wednesday at Newburgh by the police of that city who had been notified earlier in the day by the State Troopers to look out for the car driven by Scott. Sergeant James Cunningham went to Newburgh and brought Scott to Kingston and later arraigned him before Justice of the Peace Oscar Church at High Falls where Scott waived examination and was held for the grand jury.

Scott resides at High Falls and several days ago it is alleged that he picked up two young girls on the road and took them for a ride in his car, that he kept the two girls overnight and next day left them in Walden where one of the girls told the story to the authorities. On the story of the girls the authorities began an investigation. State Troopers went to the Scott home but found that he had left a day previous.

Later when his wife attempted to communicate with him his whereabouts were made known and it was learned that he was on his way to Newburgh Wednesday. The number of his car was learned and the Newburgh police notified to look out for the car. When he arrived in Newburgh in the car he was placed under arrest and the Troopers were notified.

POLICE SEARCH FOR PRESCRIPTION BANDIT

Albany, N. Y., March 25.—Police renewed their efforts today to apprehend Albany's unique criminal—a prescription bandit.

The thief has stolen more than 250 liquor prescriptions from physicians' offices within the last two days.

The prescription blanks are honored outside of Albany and Assistant Chief of Police Smurl announced today that he had broadcasted to druggists in nearby cities the number of the blanks in an effort to put an end to his depradations.

The bandit usually visits a physician's office when the physicant is out and asks permission to wait. Before the doctor returns he manages to secure the prescription blanks and escape.

Police have a good description of the thief and have issued warnings to all physicians in the city to be on the lookout.

RADIO BURGLAR WOUNDS TWO N. Y. POLICEMEN.

New York, March 25.—Two policemen were shot and seriously wounded when the so-called "Gentleman radio burglar" of Queens, who has stolen 150 expensive radio sets in the past few weeks, shot his way out of a cordon of thirty detectives and patrolmen when trapped at work early today.

Policeman Frank Donelly, 31, shot in the right breast, will recover. Policeman Arthur Kenny, 26, shot in the neck, may die.

As far as can be learned, the burglar has never stolen anything but fine radio sets.

ACID THROWER NEW TYPE OF MANIAC

Lynn, Mass., March 25.—While police of this city today were searching for the latest addition to the maniac class, the "Daylight flaming acid thrower." Lynn women joined the women of Boston and Marblehead in their fear of walking through the streets.

So far, the acid thrower has attacked three women. One is Mildred Connor, while the police have not given out the names of the others.

In each instance their clothing was burned. The acid thrower is much older than the Boston and Marblehead stabbers.

CHURCHILL'S CRITICISMS WILL NOT ALTER U. S. POLICY

Washington, March 25.—Criticisms of the American debt policy by Winston Churchill, British chancellor of the exchequer, will not alter this government's program of collecting its foreign debt on the basis of capacity to pay, treasury officials declared today.

Neither does the Coolidge administration plan to cancel a cent of outstanding foreign obligations. Churchill said the American policy was responsible for the present war-debt troubles of Europe.

FORMER PASTOR AT GARDINER GOES TO YONKERS CHURCH.

The Rev. Henry W. Brink of Woodbourne, Sullivan county, a former pastor of the Reformed Church at Gardiner, has accepted a call to the Nile Square Reformed Church at Yonkers. Mr. Brink will go to his new charge on April 9. He is a son of the late Benjamin M. Brink of this city and Kalkhaan.

The Brown who gave the Italian from Glasco $15 on his promise to return it next day was not Harris Brown of the Brown Tire Company of 642 Broadway, but Lewis Brown of the Brown Auto Supply Company of 742 Broadway.

Churchill Raps U. S. Debt Policy

London, March 25.—Winston Churchill's attack upon the American policy of debt collection, made in the House of Commons yesterday, was deliberately planned for the purpose of calling to the attention of the American public the harm resulting to Europe from the American debt policy, it was explained officially today.

The chancellor of the exchequer has no hopes that the attitude of the American Government towards debts will be changed, it was stated, but he is anxious that the American people shall know his views regarding the effects of the American refusal to cancel debts.

In some official quarters some hopes are held out that the United States Government may decide upon a change in its policy, resulting in a general re-adjustment of the debt settlements already made.

Glasco School Suit Dismissed

Supreme Court Justice Rosch Dismisses Taxpayer's Suit to Restrain School Trustees From Expending $100,000 for New School—Matter for Education Department, He Holds.

In a decision just handed down, Supreme Court Justice Joseph Rosch has dismissed the taxpayer's action brought against the board of trustees of School District, No. 9, town of Saugerties, the trustees being Frank Ferraro, John Arold and Pasquale Mauro.

An injunction had been asked for by Antoni Serra and 135 other taxpayers to restrain the trustees from expending $100,000 for a new school house at Glasco. The motion came before Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck at special term on February 6, and was argued by Benjamin Rowe for applicants and Andrew J. Cook of Van Etten & Cook, opposed. The contention was that the special meetings at which it was voted to appropriate the money for the proposed school improvements were not legally called in that notices had been posted instead of being served personally on the taxpayers. That no resolution had been adopted as the law provided at the annual meeting as to calling special meetings. This was denied by the trustees, who claimed the special meetings were legally held. Further, Mr. Cook, for the trustees, moved that the matter be dismissed as it was not one for the court to act upon but was a matter to be settled by the State Educational Department.

Judge Hasbrouck granted a temporary injunction and sent the matter to the Supreme court for trial. On March 6, at special term before Judge Rosch, who was sitting in place of Judge Hasbrouck who was at Nassau, Bahama Islands, Van Etten & Cook moved for a dismissal of the temporary injunction on the grounds that the application to restrain the trustees to raise $100,000 and erect the Glasco school house should have been brought before the State Educational Department. Judge Rosch in a short opinion dismisses the temporary injunction with $10 costs on the grounds raised by attorney for the trustees.

Nationals Will Defend Pekin

London, March 25.—Prominent Chinese, under the leadership of Chang Kai Shek, have brought about a coup d'etat in Canton and have secured control of the city from Chinese and Russian communists, according to dispatches received here.

Many of the Russian and Chinese communists have been imprisoned and some of the Russian leaders have been killed, the dispatches state.

Pekin, March 25.—With the national army drawn up for battle before Pekin, Chang Tso Lin and Wu Pei Fu are in conference today to decide whether to attack the capital or to enter into peace negotiations.

Leaders of the national army have announced that they intend to defend Pekin and hold it, until satisfactory peace terms are concluded.

The situation has been made obscure by the sudden resignation of General Chung Chih Kiang, Commander of the people's army. The government has declined to accept the resignation.

The cabinet met today for the first time in many weeks and discussed ways and means of raising funds to pay the police and troops, responsible for maintaining order. There has not been a pay day in the army or police force for several months.

The diplomatic corps has made representations to the Foreign Office demanding the protection of foreign citizens, who up to now have been unmolested.

The whereabouts of general Feng is a mystery. Reports have been received that he fled by aeroplane to Russia and arrived at Urga while contradictory reports have been received that his plane was forced down in the desert. There is many however, who believe that Feng is still at his headquarters in Kalgan and will make his appearance in due course.

Churchill Lawyers In Conference

New York, March 25.—Lawyers for Gerald Chapman, notorious bandit, scheduled to hang on April 6, in Connecticut for the murder of a New Britain policeman, will meet in an "eleventh hour" conference this afternoon to decide on whether an application shall be made to a Supreme court justice in Washington for a writ of habeas corpus or whether a new trial will be asked for in Connecticut on the grounds of newly-discovered evidence.

The discovery of a missing witness sought by Chapman's counsel is expected to materially affect the decision reached. Charles W. Gregory, of Jersey City, machinist, who identified Chapman in Wethersfield Prison, Connecticut, as the man he met on a train from Springfield, Mass., bound for New York, on the afternoon before the murder, telegraphed Frederick J. Groehl, Chapman's chief counsel, that he "was at their service if required."

Gregory may attend today's legal conference, it was said.

Meanwhile, Chapman composed poetry in his cell all day, with only eleven days remaining for his march to the gallows.

Improvement For Wall Street

Ernest Drewes, contractor and builder, has been awarded a contract for extensive alterations to the S. S. Kresge Company store at 327-329 Wall street. The work will be commenced immediately after Easter and calls for a modern front of granite, copper and plate glass. The present single entrance will be eliminated and a double entrance at either side of the store will be built. This system of a double entrance is the latest type of fronts and eliminates the congestion on busy days. A modern lighting system will be installed.

The interior of the store will be changed by the installation of new front show cases of an up-to-date style and a modern soda fountain will replace the present one. When the alterations are completed Manager M. C. Neely will have one of the most modern stores of the Kresge chain in the smaller towns.

In Police Court.

Francis McCaffrey, a local taxi driver, arrested several nights ago by Officer Bendell for refusing to move his car from in front of the high school when requested to do so, was found guilty after a trial before Judge Schofield in police court today and fined $5. Harry Eisenberg was arrested Wednesday on two charges by Motor Inspector Buchanan, who charged him with operating a car without an operator's license and of running his car with defective brakes. On the first charge he was fined $5 and costs and suspended on the second charge.

Auditor R. Piser of the State Income Tax Bureau will be at County Court House in Kingston from March 26 to April 10.

New salaried workers often are uncertain as to their exemptions under the state income tax law where they work part of a year.

Those coming in from another state must, if single file a return on New York earnings of $1,000 or more. One starting here on July first and earning $1,500 would receive one-half of the $1,000 exemption, or $500. He would then pay tax of one percent on $1,000, or ten dollars.

Married persons, living with wife or husband who also take up residence here, would submit returns on $2,500 or more of New York income. They, too, in cases where the employment ran over a part of the year, would prorate or divide the $2,500 exemption by months. This $2,500 exemption only applies to net incomes of $5,000 or less; if greater, the allowance is but $2,000.

In a recently filed New York state income tax return a loss was properly claimed for the value of an oil painting stolen from a residence.

"This is one of three groups of losses allowed under our law," said Director Thomas M. Lynch of the State Income Tax Bureau, today. "Those incurred in business or in a transaction entered into for profit are the other two classes.

"This taxpayer, after producing the records showing the reporting of the robbery to the police authorities and the value of the loss, claimed it as one incurred through theft.

"Other losses by fire, storms or from other casualties are also recognized in the state law.

"We approved a deduction in another return where the front porch of a summer cottage was destroyed by a falling tree.

"So long as the losses are actually by reason of casualties, it is immaterial whether they are in connection with the business or residence property of the taxpayer.

"When the law refers to losses arising from ventures undertaken for profit, it does not include any suffered in connection with the sale of a taxpayer's residence. Purchase of a home is not a transaction which a taxpayer sets out upon to realize profit."

DOGS KILL MAN, WHO, MAIMED, FIGHTS 2 HOURS

Veteran With One Hand Done to Death in Dark by Big Brutes.

New York.—Children dragging their sleds up a wooded hill in Lincoln Heights, Yonkers, found the body of a Spanish-American war veteran, who had been killed by two huge wild dogs from a pack which has roamed in the section for several years.

Harry Griffin, killed by the dogs in a battle that lasted two hours, lost his right hand in the Spanish American war. He made his living by doing odd jobs and lived with his aged mother in a house in a lonely section at the end of Central avenue, Yonkers.

Neighbors who heard Griffin's screams fixed the duration of the battle, and marks left in the snow told of the ferocity of the dogs and the desperation with which the maimed man fought them.

Griffin was about fifty years old. He left his home at night to visit three friends, Adolph Gardello, Connie Cahill and Dudley Donnelly, in a shack at the top of a hill 300 feet from the Bronx river road and 100 from the new Fleetwood apartments. The woods nearby are part of a picnic grove conducted by Arthur Zidler.

One Fist His Sole Weapon.

About eight o'clock that night Gardello handed Griffin a ten-dollar bill and asked him to walk to one of the lunchrooms along the road and get some spaghetti. Griffin thrust the bill into his left-hand trousers pocket and strolled from the shack. He started down the hill, across an open field packed with snow. The wind was brisk and he had his overcoat buttoned and a fur cap on his head.

About 75 feet from the door of the shack the dogs leaped upon him. A circle of paw marks was left there, where Griffin, who had no weapon and nothing which could be used as one, tried to batter the dogs' heads with his one fist and the stump of his right arm.

The Dogs Leaped Upon Him.

Fragments of his coat were ripped by the dogs' teeth, as they slashed at his body, and the bits of cloth were trampled into the snow. A sweeping paw knocked Griffin's fur cap from his head. The dogs chewed it and cut it with their teeth as if they had been starving.

Griffin evidently decided to fight his way down hill to the road instead of back to the shack. The trail of the combat, strewn with the rags the dogs made of Griffin's clothing, leads 20 feet straight toward the highway. Then the trail became irregular, zig zagging between the trees.

Drops From Loss of Blood.

There are sections as big as prize-rings where Griffin was forced to fight without moving a foot toward the road, the goal where he could find help to save his life. He was still more than 100 feet from the road when he dropped, probably so weak from loss of blood that his legs could not hold him up.

Residents of the Fleetwood apartments first heard the barking of the dogs just after eight o'clock. It continued until about ten o'clock. They heard screaming mingled with the yelps of the dogs; but the children who played on the hill were noisy, and those in the apartments thought it was a night sledding party with dogs racing down the hill beside children's sleds.

Griffin's body was mangled. His heavy leather shoes, the only covering left on his legs, were scarred by teeth.

Man Loses $13,000 in Bank During Journey

Lawrence, Mass.—That he lost $13,000 in a bank "somewhere" while taking a vacation trip is the story of Daniel Bierigan of this city. The man had $13,000 when he left Lawrence for a trip to Connecticut.

Reaching Stamford on route and deposited $13,000 in a bank. Later he lost the bank book. Now he can't remember in what town the bank is located.

Giant Photograph

A photograph recently shown in London depicted the Isle of Wight as seen from the air. The size of this photograph can be judged from the fact that it covered an area of 100 square miles on a scale of three inches to the mile.

HUMAN DERELICTS FLOODING MEXICO

Beg Money for Food, Then Purchase Liquor.

Mexico City.—There are many white derelicts who perch like carrion crows on the docks of Mayatlan, Mexico, known among seamen as "The Port of Missing Men."

They cadge their living from the sailors afloat and ashore; somehow a sailor man can't turn 'em down.

When the officers go below to mess, the perching crows, suddenly animated, rush aboard and dart to the forecastle galley and, feeding rapidly of the sailors' food, wipe the grease from their faces with their sleeves and rush ashore to resume their perches before the officers reappear.

Catching a sailor ashore, they cadge him for money to "buy something to eat." Knowing full well that the beggars lie and will buy gin with it, the sailor gives it to him, often with sarcastic witticisms, but nevertheless he gives.

These missing men, according to Capt. Edward J. Minister, master of the steamship Managui, out of Glasgow, have all seen better days.

"Most of them, I'm sorry to say, are Britishers, and not a few Germans; they have lost all self-respect. They are carrion crows in human form," he said.

"One dies and the seamen bury him—the only decent thing we can do. Now and then the consuls will get letters about these men, but it is next to impossible to locate them, for they have enough decency remaining to change their names, and their lives have changed their appearances.

"Most of these men, I think," Captain Minister continued, "are trying to forget lost loves; refugees from disappointment; men without moral fiber, the most hopeless lot, utterly without ambition, trying to forget in the Port of Missing Men, the Land of Manana. They are lost to their world, to their friends and loved ones never communicating or going back."

Cornered by Coyote, Chokes Beast to Death

Lakeside, Neb.—The dramatic fight between Joe Pozza of Lakeside and a coyote, in which Pozza succeeded in choking the hunger-stricken animal with his bare hands is being told here.

For some time the coyotes, usually cowardly animals, have startled ranchers with their boldness, flying up to ranch houses, snatching poultry and stock and attacking people. The heavy snow has made food scarce and the coyotes bolder.

Pozza says he and his woman friend were cornered by a large coyote one mile east of Lakeside. The animal, he relates leaped at them and grabbed the woman's dress, ripping it and scratching her. Fortunately, however, the animal's teeth became enmeshed in the dress just long enough for Pozza to grab him by the neck, choking it to death with his hands.

Shoots Blind Brother, Then Asks for Death

Allentown, Pa.—After shooting his blind brother as he lay sleeping in bed, Norman Farrell, twenty-eight-year-old newspaper vender, told the police, "I would be better off if I were dead and then I would have rest."

The wounded brother, Raymond, thirty-three, is in a critical condition in the Allentown hospital with a bullet wound through his right lung.

Norman has sold papers for the last 15 years at this city's busiest corner. A little more than a year ago he had saved $21,000 and purchased the home in which he lived with his parents and brother, and also bought several building lots. He also owned an automobile. Today his bank balance is only $100. Police said excessive drinking had affected his mind.

Bear Eats Dynamite

Great Falls, Mont.—Some men building a road are going to be very careful about shooting bear. A big fellow ambled into their camp, ate some dynamite with relish, then vanished in the timber.

Hidden Cash Revealed When Hotel Is Razed

Philadelphia.—When the old Overbrook hotel, for years a landmark on the White Horse pike near Lindenwold, N. J., was razed, $4,545 in cash was removed from mattresses and cupboard corners throughout the old hostelry.

The money, property of Mrs. George Thomas, proprietress, was discovered by a realty agent helping Mrs. Thomas remove her personal belongings from the hotel after its sale. The agent pulled five ten-dollar bills from a mattress, the sight of which seemed to jog Mrs. Thomas' memory.

"It's wonderful," she said. "I can remember now back as far as 25 years ago when, not having confidence in banks, I used to tuck small sums under those mattresses. Hundreds of people have slept in the beds, but the money has not been disturbed."

Amounts ranging from $20 to $500 were taken from mattresses or under carpets of every one of the 24 guest rooms of the old hotel.

The Elusive Tack

If you aren't much of a success as a carpenter and frequently hit your finger instead of the tack, stick the tack through a piece of paper and hold the paper instead of the tack. Then you can hang until you finally hit it without accident.

STANDARDIZED EDUCATION

In regard to the proposed plan to create a Federal Department of Education which would consolidate and supervise all the educational activities of the country Senator Borah is quoted as saying "The agency once established the Federal power will ultimately direct guide, dictate and control the whole educational system from the mother's knee to the final departure from the university campus Once you establish a Federal department of education, in a startling brief time it will dominate completely and in detail the States in all matters of education That is the unbroken history of Federal bureaus, the result of the philosophy of centralization its inevitable tendencies, its imperious qualities"

The advocates of this further extension of Federal power over State and local affairs, with its inevitable injury to the principle of home rule and local self-government, would resent Senator Borah's utterance as reactionary and opposed to progress. Yet it points to future peril made all the more certain by past experience. Apart from the dangers of a huge all-dominating power at Washington interfering in the properly local affairs of distant States, including the quite possible suppression of religious schools, such universal standardization is undesirable in itself. American standardization has already gone so far that it is a check upon individual initiative and freedom of development along unusual lines It begins in the public schools and goes straight on toward the production of a people not only glued to the same fashions and customs but even thinking the same thoughts, or at least giving expression to the same current ideas—with the result that the average American is too close a copy of 90 per cent of his countrymen and may almost be described as a machine-made product.

THE RISK OF IRONY.

An English university professor recently defined irony as a method of wounding under the guise of flattery. There is irony of this sort, such as the biting literary mockeries of Dean Swift, but there is a more innocent irony which seeks merely to bring the point into bold relief by extravagance of misstatement. Commenting on this irony of the more usual sort, a metropolitan editor pointedly says "Irony is one of the finest and subtlest weapons which a literary man can use, but he is warned that it must be employed with the greatest care, being two-edged. It may cut the one who wields it. This danger is with special reason urged upon journalists Appealing as they must to many literal-minded folk, they can not be sure that their ironic statements will be understood by all

The literal-minded folk are numerous and too many of them need a Josh Billings to tell them that "that was writ sarkastic." A certain man of middle age was recently taught a lesson he will not soon forget, with his warning to put a check-rein upon his fondness for ironical statement. In his presence two young women of quite average intelligence were complaining of how shop girls favored men purchasers before their turn and made women wait. "Yes," said the man, "I have noticed that. They have even done it for me. But not so often now," he added, thinking he might safely venture, "as they did when I was young and beautiful." Instead of laughing gaily, as was expected, the two young women stared reprovingly at a man conceited and brazen enough to claim that he was "beautiful" in his youth!

OUR GOODS IN BRITAIN.

It seems that the popularity of American typewriting machines as well as of American films is causing disturbance in England Not long ago the Labor Daily Herald announced that there are approximately 24,700 foreign typewriters in the offices of the British government and they King George himself, when purchasing the "Buy British Goods" campaign was reported as saying that so many typewriters of American make in use in the official offices was scandalous." After this an explanation of a sort followed It was said that the government's American typewriters were purchased during the war when it was impossible to procure them elsewhere and that subsequently a small number of British machines had been bought and were being tested "as to durability and suitability"

But according to the Labor Herald the guilt is shared even by those joining in the protest "The hollowness of the 'buy British goods' cry," it is quoted, "may be judged from the fact that the bulk of the typewriters used at Carmelite House are American, and that orders were placed some time ago by which the whole of the printing plant to be laid down in the new Daily Mail building, now in course of construction, will be supplied by an American firm." One is reminded of the story that when Bismark was privately reproached for drinking French champagne instead of German, he replied with a shrug that his patriotism stopped at his stomach.

PAIN IN APPENDIX REGION.

One of the points about appendicitis that we fully believed years ago, was that appendicitis always had been a frequent cause of death, but it had been called simply "inflammation of the bowels"

Now this was true, but not to the extent we believed or were taught, because now a surgeon investigating deaths from acute abdominal ailments in large hospitals where post mortems have been carefully made for the past hundred years, reports that the appendix was not the portion at fault any more than other parts of the intestine. In other words appendicitis, while not really a new ailment, is one that is increasing at an alarming rate.

Further, that in fatal cases, whether or not an operation was performed, it was unusually absorption of poisonous products from the intestine itself that caused the death, rather than the infection. That, where in these severe cases it was possible to remove these waste products, the patient had a good chance for recovery.

One of the mistakes folks make is to take a purgative for every form of abdominal pain. There is no question but that nine times out of ten, or even ninety-nine out of every hundred times, this is good treatment but where the pain is anywhere near the lower right side of abdomen, in appendix region, and remains there steadily for any little time you shouldn't take a chance, but should see your doctor at once It may be only a pressure pain from gas collecting behind the "S" curve in that region, but the fact that it is in that region should make you careful, and if it remains in the one spot, should make you doubly so.

Where the diagnosis is definitely made, your doctor can watch the case, and as is so often, necessary an operation must be performed, three hours may make a difference to your chances for an uneventful recovery Remember, most pains in abdomen are gas pressure pains, but by remembering the suggestions above, you are not likely to make any mistake by neglecting to call in your physician

New Englanders Settle on Long Island and Smithtown is Patented, March 25, 1677.

When Long Island first became known it was inhabited by thirteen tribes of Indians, of which all but two resided wholly or in part in the present Suffolk County Of these the Montauk were the most numerous and powerful; and the consent of Wyandance, their grand sachem, was necessary to the validity of all Indian grants of that date upon the island.

The earliest settlement upon Long Island was made in 1639, on Gardiners Island, under title from James Farrett, agent of the Earl of Stirling, to whom a grant of the whole of Long Island had been made by the Plymouth Company. Southold and Southampton were settled in 1640, Easthampton in 1648 Shelter Island in 1652, Huntington in 1653, Brookhaven in 1655 and Smithtown in 1656

These towns were settled by English immigrants from New England They were strongly imbued with Puritan doctrines and zealously devoted to their strict observance. The towns were jealous of the admission of strangers, and only allowed them to participate in their privileges upon careful examination of character and motive

These settlers naturally sought alliance with the adjacent New England colonies, to whom they were warmly attached and with whom they were closely united until they were brought under the government of New York

Smithtown, the most western of these earliest settlements, was named from Richard Smith, Jr., of Narragansett, R. I., the original patentee.

Smith's parents moved from Gloucestershire, England, to Boston in 1630. Richard married in Boston, and settled in Taunton, in 1637, where he remained until 1641, when he purchased 30,000 acres of land from the Narragansett Indians, erected a house for trade, and gave free entertainment to travellers. Smith's house was the first built in Narragansett.

Smith made many other purchases of the Indians, one of which, made June 8, 1659, gave rise to great disputes, and was the final cause of Smith's removal to Long Island, and his settlement of Smithtown.

In 1654 war broke out between the Ninigret and the Long Island Indians. In one of their expeditions to Long Island Ninigret took, among other captives, fourteen of their women, one of whom proved to be the daughter of Wyandance.

These captives were taken by Lyon Gardiner to Smith's house, where the princess remained until she was restored to her father by Gardiner, who gave as her ransom a grant of all the Nesaquake lands, since called Smithtown.

Smith's house was the rendezvous of the whites during all the Indian wars, and he was very influential with the Indian chiefs. He negotiated and signed the treaty for Connecticut; several times made peace between the Narragansett tribe and Massachusetts colonists, until his eastern neighbors became jealous of his power, and actually indicted him in their court, ordered him to be arrested, and carried him to Newport for trial.

They attempted to defeat the lease of his Narragansett lands, which occasioned Roger Williams to interfere in his behalf to King Charles II But Smith became disgusted at their conduct, and purchased from Lyon Gardiner, the Nesaquake lands on Long Island, to which place he removed and left his eastern possessions with relatives.

On the arrival of Colonel Richard Nicolls, as governor of New York, he received a patent for his Smithtown tract, and after a successful lawsuit, he secured from Sir Edward Andros a confirmatory patent, under the title of Smithtown, dated March 25, 1677. It was reorganized as a town March 7, 1788.

This vicinity was the scene of action during the Revolutionary War, and Fort Slongo, erected there by the British, was captured by Americans, under Colonel Benjamin Tallmadge, October 3, 1781.

Richard Smith made his will on March 5, 1691 and died soon afterward. The town was divided among his grandchildren on March 13, 1735.

ENVOYS LEAVE FOR CANADA.

Philadelphia, March 25, 1776—Dr. Benjamin Franklin, Charles Carroll of Carrollton and Samuel Chase left today for Canada as envoys from Congress. They go with broad powers to negotiate with the Canadians to bring Canada into complete union with the thirteen colonies now united against Great Britain. They have almost unlimited authority to deal with whatever conditions they may encounter.

The commissioners are to assert that Canada's interests and ours are inseparably united and that it is impossible that we can be reduced to a servile submission to Great Britain without their sharing our fate; and that if we obtain a full establishment of our rights, it depends wholly on their choice whether they will participate with us in those blessings. The Canadians will be urged to put themselves under the protection of the United Colonies. Methods of organising their affairs are to be recommended to them. The formal instructions of the envoys say:

"Explain to them the nature and principles of government among freemen * * *. Endeavor to stimulate them by motives of glory, as well as interest, to assume a part in a contest, by which they must be deeply affected * * * Promise to the whole people the free and undisturbed exercise of their religion * * * Assure them that it is our earnest desire to adopt them into our union, as a sister colony, and to secure the same general system of mild and equal laws for them and for ourselves with only such local differences as may be agreeable to each colony respectively * * * Should they agree to our terms, promise in the names of the United Colonies that we will defend and protect the people of Canada against all enemies, in the same manner as we will defend and protect any of the United Colonies."

Furthermore, the commissioners are to establish and enforce regulations for the preservation of good order, compose differences between our troops and the Canadians, sit and vote as members of councils of war in directing defenses, encourage the trade of Canada with the Indian nations, establish a free press, use every wise and prudent measure to give credit and circulation to the continental money in Canada, and assure the Canadians that their foreign commerce shall, in all respects, be put on an equal footing with ours.

Congressmen are privately admitting among themselves that they have handed over to their envoys a rather large order.

Musical Service At St. John's Church

As was announced some time ago, the choir of St. John's Church, under the direction of Robert Williams, will sing the sacred cantata, "The Darkest Hour," by Harold Moore, on Palm Sunday afternoon. This cantata, one of the finest works in English for the season of Lent, has been growing steadily in favor with conductors throughout the country, and many of the finest choirs in the large cities have featured it this season.

The cantata is in six sections, as follows: Prologue; Scene 1, Gethsemane; Scene 2, The Trials, Before Caiaphas and Pilate; Scene 3, On the Road to Calvary; Scene 4, Calvary; Epilogue. The Libretto, selected for the most part from the Holy Scriptures, is unusually well-knit, and the musical score one of considerable distinction. Generally speaking, the composer has written with commendable restraint, but in the scene before Pilate he becomes intensely dramatic, and uses his chorus with thrilling effect. Again, the dignified simplicity of the score in the scene on Calvary reveals the reverent mind that made the writing of this splendid work possible.

The soloists will be: Carl Pierson, bass, singing the part of Jesus; Joseph Craig, tenor, as the Narrator, and also as Pilate; Raymond Dubois, bass, as Caiaphas; J. T. Hookey, tenor, singing parts of the Prologue and Epilogue, and Master Arthur Hasenbush, soprano, who will sing the solo, "O Perfect Life of Love."

The service will begin at four o'clock, and the public is cordially invited.

Dog Lives in the Present

The great difference between dog and man is that the dog has hardly any power of looking into the future. Man spends most of his time thinking of what is going to happen tomorrow, next week, or next year, and preparing for it. To a dog the present is the only thing that counts.

It is true that a dog will bury a bone to be dug up later on, but in doing so he does not say to himself, "I am not hungry now: I may be hungry tomorrow. Therefore, I will make provision." The act is merely instinctive, and to be compared with the storing of nuts by the squirrel or the dormouse.

USE BARE BUS WIRE

Covered Wire Not So Efficient as Bare Wire.

F. M. Russell.

Air is the best insulator we know of at the present time but is not perfect. We all know that the dielectric losses between two plates enclose in a vacuum are much less than they are when the plates are at atmospheric pressure, thus proving that even air is not a perfect insulator.

If we introduce a solid dielectric such as mica, bakelite, paper or cardboard between two plates we have more loss than we had when there was nothing but air between the plates. The reason for this is that every time a difference in potential is set up between the plates, a strain is created in the dielectric between the plates and when this potential disappears the strain is released then the cycle is repeated perhaps millions of times a second. This all represents a waste of energy and is a resistance to the circuit.

This brings us to the use of spaghetti or other insulation covering bus wires. When a wire is carrying a current it is surrounded by a static field and acts as one plate in a condenser, the other plate being the other wires or parts near it. When bare wire is used, the insulation or dielectric is air, but if it is covered with spaghetti this is the dielectric, and as stated above this introduces losses. These losses may not be very large but the current dealth with in a radio receiver are so very small that even small losses affect the results you get.

Use covered wire wherever it is necessary, that is where a "B" battery line come into close proximity to a filamint lead. Always try and run your wiring in such a way that there is at least half an inch between leads, then when they cross or come very close together and there is danger of a wire touching, use a piece of spaghetti.

IN LONDON.

Jewelry novelties are interesting English women to a considerable extent at the present time, one of the newest innovations being a minute, flat, folded watch, made in delicately colored enamel, which can be made to open out and stand upright. Watches enclosed in gold and silver balls, studded with gems, and worn pendant fashion, are another watch novelty which has met with approval, as have also those enclosed in rings, which are worn on the first finger.

Black and navy blue taffeta have returned to definite favor for afternoon wear. Ecru lace is used on black taffeta dresses, while navy blue gowns show trimmings of blue and white chiffon or georgette. It is believed that white taffeta will come into prominence in the summer months.

• • •

The lastest in umbrellas are those devised in a collapsible frame with a telescopic handle, which, when extended, provided a standard size umbrella, and when compressed will fit into a small handbag.

• • •

Contrasting coats in ensemble suits are reported to be more popular than coats of the same color as the dress. For example, a green dress trimmed with gray may have a gray coat. It is not unusual to see three sorts of pleating on a dress, and to mix styles and trimmings in the right way is the prerogative of the leading dressmakers.

• • •

Floating panels, flat flounces and apron draperies serve to vary the line and give an easy flow to dresses and at the same time keep the line of the figure slim. Neck trimmings show elaborations, and little collars of lace or chiffon feature many dresses, usually held together with narrow ribbons of colors harmonizing with that of the dress.

Children's Colds Best Treated Externally

CONSTANT dosing upsets little stomachs. Modern mothers prefer to treat children's colds externally—with Vicks VapoRub. They simply rub it on the throat and chest at bedtime.

Vicks acts two ways at once:

(1) Like the old-fashioned poultice in "drawing out" the soreness and pain; and, at the same time,

(2) Like a modern vapor lamp because the body heat releases the ingredients in the form of medicated vapors which are inhaled all night long. These loosen the phlegm and open the congested air passages.

Most colds yield by morning to this double direct action.

Mr. Langstaff, who originated the Jackdaw's House, for children in London, has just started a children's cathedral as an annex of his church in Walden. This is the first children's cathedral in the world. Mr. Langstaff's theory is that the cathedral will keep the children closer to their religion. The children conduct the services. Sermons are written by the rector and read by one of the children.

TRAVELED HORNED TOAD

"It's a great relief to me, said the Horned Toad "And by that I mean that it makes me feel I can sit back or hop back and take a long breath."

The Horned Toad

"Oh dear" said the Lizard in the next little house in the big insect building of the zoo have you had trouble with your heart?"

"Heart, heart heart?" repeated the Toad three times in succession

"What in the world do you mean?"

"I mean have you trouble with your heart?"

"Heart?" repeated the toad once again "I have nothing the matter with my heart

"At least I don't think I have

"Perhaps I have for all I know

"Dear me maybe I have

"My poor toad heart may be out of order One often doesn't know these things

"Such strange troubles we may have and know nothing about them until we go to the doctor

"Is there a good Toad specialist around these parts, do you suppose?"

"I only meant—" the Lizard commenced but the Horned Toad went right on talking

"I don't want any doctor who looks after all sorts of creatures and all sorts of complaints I want a specialist

"I want one who understands Toads thoroughly and completely and absolutely

"I want one who will not have to be told that I am a member of the Lizard family but who will know that without being told"

The Horned Toad stopped for breath

"My dear Toad," said the Lizard "you mustn't get excited over what I said.

"You told me that you could take a long breath now—or rather that was what you said a few minutes ago, and I thought from that that perhaps you might have something the matter with your heart

"I don't believe you have at all now You could not talk so long without stopping if you had

"You mustn't get like foolish people and creatures who imagine they have every sickness going.

"Just as soon as some people hear of a new sickness they think they have it"

"You're right" said the Horned Toad "I see now what you meant by your question

"But the reason I can take a long breath now—or rather the reason why I could take a few minutes ago is that I am so relieved and happy that at last people will

"I drank water which dropped on the trees and I ate insects—as I do here.

"But oh, how thankful I am to be known for what I am, as I was dreadfully afraid when I first arrived they wouldn't know me at all.

"I am a traveled Toad, too. I have come from one state to another."

Was Ready for Play

Junior called at our neighbor's home recently and politely informed her he was ready for play and wanted Jean to come right out

"But Jean isn't feeling well this morning," said the mother. "Come around this afternoon and Jean will be feeling much better and can play with you"

Junior, disappointed, turned to go with this parting remark "Gee's all right, but I won't be feeling so well myself this afternoon"

Varied Ideas About Money and Its Uses

Probably more has been said and written about money than any other subject under the sun. Fielding who spoke with the authority of a magistrate, once commented that "money is the fruit of evil as often as the root of it." Doctor Johnson said, "Money, in whatever hands, will confer power." In "The Way of All Flesh," Samuel Butler wrote that "money is like a reputation for ability—more easily made than kept." His modern disciple, G. Bernard Shaw, goes farther and says, "Any fool can save money; it takes a wise man to spend it." Bacon wrote, "Money is like manure: of little use unless it be spread" A quotation from Horace reads, "Money answered either serves or rules us."

John Stuart Mill, in his monumental work, "The Principles of Political Economy," points out that furs, cowrie shells and even cubes of compressed tea have been used in various places as money. He goes on to say that "money is a commodity and its value is determined, like other commodities, temporarily by demand and supply, permanently and on the average by cost of production."

No article about money would be complete without quoting an American. It seems typical of the American mind always to couple money with work—they rarely refer to the one without the other Thus John D. Rockefeller: "I determined that, in addition to working for money, I would make money work for me."—John o' London's Weekly.

Authors Who Evinced Interest in Cookery

If the stories of Brillat-Savarin which it is proposed to publish in connection with the centenary next year of his death are as interesting as the extracts which have been published in advance, they will add to the fame which their author has won for himself as a writer on gastronomy. Balzac, perhaps, regarded as a gourmet, was also a gourmand. Dickens took a keen interest in cookery and had a hearty appetite. So also did George Meredith, whose cookery book was published in 1898. Thackeray, who was a good trencherman, was as exacting as he was in his literary work. Joseph Conrad, as he admitted in connection with a cook book written by Mrs Conrad, gave a high place in his esteem to the culinary arts, while George Moore left a book of cookery recipes in his own handwriting which figured in a book sellers catalogue a few years ago and may possibly yet appear in print.

Food and Hibernation

Hibernating animals enter the state of hibernation more quickly and remain in it much longer when they do not get much to eat and when their air supply is limited. This fact seems to have been established by experiments performed by Dr George Johnson. He found that ground squirrels on limited rations retired to winter quarters earlier and woke up less often than those given ample food. Animals when in a state of hibernation, he found, have a body temperature much lower than that of ordinary sleep. The results were similar when some of the squirrels were placed in cans where the air supply was limited. Sufficient strength remains in light and darkness seems to have no effect whatever upon the state of hibernation.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Six New Apples Offered Fanciers

Worth Trying, Say Station Fruit Men Who Originated Them.

Geneva, N. Y., March 25.—Six new varieties of apples, all superior in some way to existing varieties of their season, developed by the fruit specialists at the State Experiment Station here are now available for trial by fruit growers. The new apples, which have been named Lodi, Medina, Orleans, Milton Sweet Delicious, and Sweet McIntosh are described in a recent station publication on new or note-worthy fruits prepared by Dr. U. P. Hedrick, station horticulturist.

Each new kind is distinguished in some way as superior to present varieties which makes it a desirable addition to the apple planting. A limited amount of stock of the new varieties is available at cost to those who care to give them a trial.

Improved Delicious.

Two of the new apples, Medina and Orleans, are in reality improved Delicious, itself one of the best dessert apples. In New York, however, Delicious lacks size and the station fruit specialists have attempted to overcome this defect in their breeding work. As a result, Medina and Orleans, sister seedlings of a cross between Delicious and Deacon Jones, are now being offered fruit growers as varieties of the Delicious type but with larger, handsomer fruit.

Sweet Delicious was also obtained from a cross between Deacon Jones and Delicious and is a large, attractive apple especially well suited for home use for baking or for dessert.

Lodi is an improved Yellow Transparent, resulting from a cross between Montgomery and Yellow Transparent. The fruit is larger than that of Yellow Transparent and ripens a little later, thus prolonging the season for this popular type of apple. The apples keep well and do not grow mealy and soften at the center as does Yellow Transparent.

Milton makes its chief claim to recognition by virtue of the fact that it is another of the series of McIntosh-like apples that have been perfected by the station fruit breeders. A cross between McIntosh and Yellow Transparent, Milton comes into season after Early McIntosh and from a month to six weeks before McIntosh. The fruit is most attractive and has the McIntosh flavor and aroma.

Sweet McIntosh developed from a cross between McIntosh and Lawyer. The fruit resembles Lawyer more than it does McIntosh, but the sweet flavor is characteristically McIntosh. It is primarily a variety for home use.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

USE OIL EMULSION TO CONTROL SCALE

There is a growing tendency among apple growers to substitute oil emulsions for lime-sulphur for the control of scale insects, especially the San Jose scale. A number of growers in New York state, particularly in the Hudson river valley, where apple scab is not a major problem, used oil emulsions with bordeaux during the past season for the delayed dormant spray. Their thought in using the oil was to control the scale and rosy aphid, and with the bordeaux they hoped to eliminate the light infection of apple scab with which they are sometimes troubled, writes Glenn W. Herrick in the Rural New Yorker. The formula which we believe safest to use is as follows: Potash fish-oil soap, two pounds; red engine or diamond paraffin oil, two gallons; water (soft), one gallon.

This emulsion is known as the lubricating oil emulsion. It is being widely used in the Middle West to combat the San Jose scale. A 2 per cent emulsion is employed for application to the trees while they are in the dormant stage in the early spring and even up to and including the delayed dormant stage. The 2 per cent emulsion is obtained by putting the whole batch of stock emulsion containing the two gallons of oil in a 100 gallon tank and then filling the tank with soft water.

The growers in the Hudson river valley have combined the oil with a 3-3-100 bordeaux mixture by adding the batch of stock emulsion to 97 gallons of the bordeaux, the latter being made up in the usual way by using three pounds of copper sulphate, three pounds of fresh stone lime, and 100 gallons of water. This combination of 2 per cent oil and 3-3-100 bordeaux has been applied during the delayed dormant period without injury. The oil should aid in the control of the oyster shell scale, and the bordeaux although weak, should aid in checking the scab. We believe, however, that further applications of bordeaux or lime sulphur should be made for the scab, especially if this disease is prevalent and serious in Nova Scotia.

Orchard Problem to Get Apples to Bear Early

The first apples borne on a tree are its most valued ones. The first crop is rarely large enough to more than check the mounting expense connected with starting an orchard. This small financial help is, however, especially welcome. The early fruits also give promise of better times ahead. At least, one of the most discussed orchard cultural problems is the one of getting early bearing.

What should be done or not done to get apples to bear at an early orchard age? At times the answer seems clear; at other times it is not so definite. Trees which grow very much are usually late in bearing unless they produce terminal and lateral blossoms at an early age. Checking the wood growth usually helps early fruiting but starved trees are late in bearing. Pruning is commonly found to delay bearing but there are frequent and marked instances of cutting having hastened blossom bud formation. Sometimes the use of readily available nitrogenous fertilizers bring trees into bearing, and at other times it unquestionably retards early fruiting.

Propagating Currants in Spring Is Favored Plan

Currants will strike root readily in most any way they are handled. Sometimes they are planted out in the fall directly after being cut, but ordinarily they are either buried outdoors butts up or else stored in a cool cellar so as to hasten callus formation, and then in the spring they are planted out. The length of cutting depends mostly upon the amount of wood available and the convenience of handling. Ten inches is a good average. A three-foot currant cutting is too long. The roots that it will form will not be able to keep such a large top supplied with food materials and moisture. It will be just as well to defer cutting back until spring, on account of possible killing back, but one or two buds above ground are sufficient.

Horticulture Hints

Apple, king of fruits, nature's richest gift, better than medicine.

* * *

Apple scab passes the winter on old leaves and if they can be disposed of it will aid materially in producing clean fruit.

* * *

Have you put up any homes for the birds? Rustic ones are practical and ornamental. Put them up before spring comes.

* * *

Don't prune large main limbs from mature apple trees. Use discretion and a smaller saw, or even a pair of pruning shears.

* * *

Prune the grapes—this fruit is borne on shoots of the present season from last year's wood. Cut back several canes of last year's growth to three buds each and remove the rest.

CRUSADER TOWNS GET INTO NEWS

Dispatches From Syria Recall Forgotten Places.

Washington —Dispatches from Syria tell of political prisoners being sent to Ruad, and mention other places which emerge into the day's news, after lying in the back waters of world history since the time of the Crusades.

In a communication to the National Geographic society, Maynard Owen Williams tells of a recent trip he made through this historic, but almost forgotten, region.

"As one comes up to Tartus from the south having left the ruins of Marathus behind and drawn a sort of coast circle around the shoreward side of Ruad the most prominent feature of the landscape is a huge Crusader church bulking large above the town. The interior, when one has entered it, through a small breach in the age browned wall, color of crumbling newspaper falling away from some treasure it enveloped, or of nut brown mummy wrapping is pleasing in its grace. Time, however has worn finger holes in the once rounded columns, and it resembles the workshop of a carnival committee or a pageant board because artless battlements, jigsawed from thin lumber, fill one corner.

Mosque Is Deserted.

"The Crusader church stands alone between flat-roofed houses and the fertile plain, edged with spiny cactus. On the right-hand forward corner there is a small tower erected when there were plans of making a mosque of this vast barn of a building. But Tartus is small and a mosque, like a cafe, is at its best when embellished with humans compacted together. A great face, high under upturned domes, may need only the complement of a lowly, kneeling figure to make it a house of worship. The mosque, lacking the presence, needs a more companionable upholstery of living beings in it. So the church, no longer church, is saved from the desecration of non-Christian worship and abandoned to the desecration of dirt.

"In the walled town (the roadway from the south enters a hole hacked in Phoenician masonry coeval with Solomon's temple perhaps) there is a Crusader's hall, the outside of which runs along one side of the square. But search as I would, no matter how many Moslem women or village boys guided me about, I was not able to see the inside of this hall, now divided among many owners.

"A little farther on, its megalithic foundations sloping to the disused moat, there is a former church now a mosque, with a really fine minaret proclaiming its presence. Above the arched doorway a cross has given way to a sort of trefoil which disguises the effacement, and the imam, handsome and commanding in presence, is so cordial a friend that one cannot begrudge him the privilege of instructing the youths in a narrow corridor of a room flanking the main hall.

"The student may, if he will, trace the megalithic wall most of the way around the town. But to what purpose? Does counting stones awaken the imagination? Or does one huge block, its cheek bulging beyond the carefully cut edges trimmed to a perfect line along the seam, betray the workmanship as akin to that which Hiram did for his Jewish friends on Mount Zion?

When Crusaders Sailed Home.

"Tartus was the last place on the mainland to be held by the Christians, but it was from Ruad that the last of the Crusaders, giving up hope of Christianizing by the sword a land in which they had lived for two centuries, set sail for home. When the Twentieth century fighters arrived to fight against the Turks and Germans, Ruad was occupied by the French, and today its central castle, dominating the low lying island, and in turn dominated by a lighthouse, is the prison of political prisoners.

"Ruad stirs the imagination because, quarrying away its tiny coast line to construct a megalithic wall which dropped sheer to the surf, the Arvadians shut themselves into a place where, lacking a fleet they would starve, but sallying forth from there they dominated the mainland as far as the Orontes including the Nosariyeh hills, now inhabited by descendants of several mystic sects and those who gave the word assassin to the world.

"Today the men of Ruad are skillful mariners as of old and in the ice waters between the island and the mainland, there are many small ships. These ships are all that turn the balance of trade in favor of the island, enabling it to live, for all the food is imported from the mainland. It is a tiny Britain around which one can row in half an hour, and the boatman who ferried me across from Tartus in a heavy boat equipped with four oarsmen and a sail was glad to add a trip around Ruad to the ferry passage for the promise of an extra 50 per cent added to the 75 cent fare which was the minimum for a direct crossing.

"Tonight I sat in a Tartus cafe full of mariners in conical felt caps slouchy and comfortable, and town folks in fartoushes well pressed and ruddy in the light."

How to Lower Dairy Feed Costs

Experiment Station Shows That Milk Production Can be Maintained More Economically—Grain Mixture Used in Station.

Geneva, N. Y., March 25.—Dairy specialists at the State Experiment Station here are calling attention to the feeding practices followed with the station's herd of Jersey cows which have maintained milk and butter fat production at well above the state average at a considerable saving in the feed bill. Records preserved since 1900 are cited as showing that the liberal use of alfalfa or clover hay and corn silage the cost of producing 100 pounds of milk has been materially reduced.

"Legume hay has constituted from one-half to three-fourths the hay fed at the station, the balance being timothy and orchid grass," says a recent statement on the subject. "The grain mixture has always been a simple home-mixed ration containing 17 to 22 per cent crude protein, although for the past four years this mixture has contained 18 to 19 per cent protein."

The Station Dairy Ration.

"The grain mixture used in the station ration has been prepared by mixing corn, oats, bran and oil meal in approximately equal parts by weight One per cent of common salt is added to this mixture, and for the past three years steamed bone meal has also been used, but without any apparent benefit.

"All these ingredients are purchased in the open market in 1 or 2 ton lots and at prices which have made the mixture cost from $31 to $44 per ton during the past three years. This is considerably lower than feed mixtures containing higher percentages of protein, and represents a saving of $15 per ton as compared with the cost of a standard 24 per cent grain mixture. This mixture is fed throughout the year to all the cows in herd, even if dry.

"While well-cured alfalfa hay and corn silage will maintain moderately high milk yields, on most farms the hay will not be sufficiently well cured and a good grain ration such as that fed to the station herd will undoubtedly prove beneficial.

"The best argument in favor of any feeding system is the result obtained over a long period of years. Last year the station herd produced on an average of 7 185 pounds of milk containing 407 6 pounds of butter fat These figures include every cow in the barn, while cows on register of merit test have done much better. It is evident that the cows are in good health and that they are maintaining a high level of production with the ration that they are receiving."

Weaving Genius

Until the close of the Eighteenth century all fabrics carrying colored designs were woven entirely by hand. About 1801 Joseph Marie Jacquard invented an attachment which is placed at the top of a loom and automatically selects strands of yarn required to form the patterns and draws them up to make the surface of the cloth and at the same time leaves the other strand to form the back of the fabric The attachment has ever since been called the jacquard The invention was first put into commercial use in 1809 in France.

A doctor's little daughter, deeply interested in radio, glanced one morning into her father's office where the doctor was examining the heart and lungs of a patient, and inquired sweetly. "Getting any new stations, daddy?"

Heard in the Cafeteria.

He: "Say, you took my knife, now what will I butter my bread with?"
She. "Why, butter of course!"

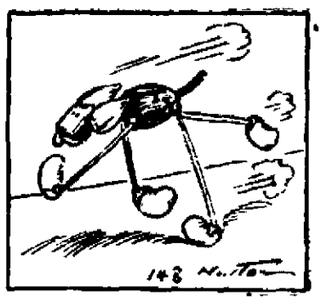
Nutty Natural History

By HUGH HUTTON.



THE PIGEON-TOED WHIPPET.

Here is a curious form of racing hound developed by the natives of the Scotch Lowlands on which they could safely bet their farthings as against the fast whippets of the English. The whiffet, being pigeon-toed, can get a better grip on the ground. It eats practically nothing, a habit which makes it very lean and the board bill very small, the latter fact particularly endearing it to the Scots. It is useless for hunting, however, as it gets past the rabbit in the first ten feet, going so fast that it never sees it.

Its head is a filbert and the body a single peanut. The ears are split almond kernels, the nose is a popcorn and the tail a clove. The legs are toothpicks and the feet split lima beans. All are shown, of course, on a very small scale above.

Odd Marriage Custom

A queer marriage custom prevails among the native tribes on the Pungwe river in Central Africa. When a man marries, his sister goes through a wedding ceremony with the bride's brother. If there is no sister the bridegroom has to enter into an agreement with the brother in law to work for him for a period of three years. [illegible] standard value of a sister.

Velvet, Fur, Used to Trim Apparel

Varied Flares Conspicuous in Fashions Offered by Parisiennes.

The most significant feature of winter fashions is the new silhouette which has finally and utterly deposed tenacious tubularity. You may banish every last lingering doubt; the undeviatingly slender outline, called variously pencil, tubular, straight-line and narrow, has lost its place in the sun and belongs now to the oblivion of history. In its place there have come not one silhouette but many, each basing its vogue on the mere fact that it is no longer straight, advises a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune.

The most usual of the new outlines is the hemline flare, frequently, but not always, accompanied by a molded bodice. Constant iteration for several seasons has made the sudden skirt flare sound much older than it looks, but in any case it is the dean of the new outlines, numerically the most popular and destined shortly to be succeeded by less decisive conceptions. Newer variants are the shoulder flare and the princess silhouette, whose vogues will rapidly gather momentum as autumn turns to winter and winter to spring, and the kinetic line of Lucien Lelong, perhaps the most discussed development of the season. Kinetic, as Lelong uses it, connotes motion, and the kinetic silhouette is merely a free swinging outline designed to keep pace with the restless mobility of modern women. Freedom is its essence and no matter how complicated the cut the effect is always one of unencumbering simplicity. It does not attain genuine width until the wearer is in motion.

Velvet Is Prominent.

Velvet is the material which should be worn by the composite smart maiden, and its popularity evidences the power of propaganda. Months ago, when the ladies of the sea were pirouetting on the summer sands, the stage was skillfully set for the entry of velvet into fashion's domain.

Skirt length is a theme upon which Paris and New York are not in accord, but the difference is not great. The Parisienne keeps her hemline about sixteen inches off the ground while the modish mesdames on this side of the Atlantic have moderately lowered the border from two to three inches. Your composite lady then will have to include two skirt lengths in her wardrobe—if she must indicate a preference it should be for the edict of New York—the longer and more graceful skirt which reaches to thirteen or fourteen inches off the ground.

The high neckline is another identifying mark of this season, given the stamp of authority at Longchamp, and it may be choker, round or square. On our typical lady we shall choose the high square line although it does not rank first numerically. It is the most advanced type, however, and will survive the others.

The Longchamp ladies are unanimous in exploiting the long narrow sleeve, which is neither new nor unexpected—it has been constantly predicted since early summer and there was no serious attempt made to introduce any other type at the August openings. The long sleeve is such a gratifying relief from the abbreviated species of the flapper era that we hesitate to seek a change except in the matter of variation. The composite sleeve is narrow to the elbow, puffed below and is gathered at the wrist.

Fur Used in Profusion.

The trimming question in a single word is fur—fur at diverse points and in profusion—fur in the conservative natural shades and fur dyed in high colors to harmonize with the costume—furs of many different species, but always fur. The vividly colored trimming furs enjoyed a brilliant but fleeting early season vogue which never received the sanction of the haute monde. Longchamp has registered flatly against it and the natural undyed pelts are the ones that belong in the smart winter picture.

As far as color is concerned we are disposed to disregard the verdict of Longchamp. Throngs at this fashionable race course adopted black fur coats and ensembles in gradually increasing numbers. Paris, too, reports an unexpected increase of black for all occasions and there is no doubt that smart women on the continent have returned for the moment to this shade of the past. Yet we cannot consider it as anything more than a temporary aberration and one which does not coincide with the tempo of the mode. Greens, blues, browns, dark reds and grays reflect better the feeling of the moment, and it would be rank heresy to dress our composite lady in black immediately after the colorful Paris exposition des Arts Decoratifs. Green is a little newer and perhaps a little smarter than the others and we suggest it for the frugal ladies who look toward tomorrow.

Featuring Knife-Plaited Skirt, Cuffs, Flare-Back Collar.

These are the outstanding general themes of the crystallized fall and winter modes of 1925, yet, individually or collectively, they are meaningless unless they incorporate the proper atmosphere. The maiden of this very enlightened year is a most feminine creature in comparison with her mannish predecessors of last season and her boyish prototypes of open-coated flapper days. Severity has been replaced by elaboration, and everywhere the mode is striving toward gentler conceptions. There is nothing Victorian about the new femininity, which is quite apparent—indeed it is a highly sophisticated species, but it has a balance and maturity to it that makes last year's styles look adolescent in comparison. Not an elegante, in the early century meaning of the term, the smart maiden distinctly deserves that appellation in its modern connotation. Her composite version must announce—and in a very positive way—the new feminine feeling.

Tailored Afternoon Frock With Skirt of Rich Black Velvet.

Cape Theme Is Featured.

Captain Molyneux, in his winter offering, favors an extremely moderate sort of flare which is a compromise between the straight-line and the hemline diversion.

The cape theme for winter and resort wear, has a prominent place in all three collections, and it is freely predicted [illegible] vital items of next spring. [illegible] utilizes the cape idea for separate wraps or [illegible] coats, while Bertheau introduces it as a cape and dress ensemble. Chanel has several prominent models in her winter showing.

The jumper dress holds its perennial place with no perceptible diminution of its vogue, although the new versions are different. Molyneux, for instance, combines a jumper frock with a matching topcoat while Chanel's jumper models invariably have the wooden skirts which are pleated and flare to varying degree. The short jacket suit, featured particularly by Molyneux, is another mid-winter note which will be heard again next spring.

Decorative Heels.

The decorative heel is one of the logical developments of the trend toward more feminine conceptions, and the early winter models are taking advantage of this phase of elaboration. Heels which match the hosiery are a smart note in evening slippers and one better is observed in shoes which combines a Cuban heel and a square buckle, each studded with pearls in the same effect. Another modish version matches the heel with the lining of the shoe—an inheritance from the costume ensemble. Both best effects are also en vogue. Perugia, the famous French bootier, is emphasizing metal heels for his afternoon and evening models, and they are invariably ornamented in a striking manner. For formal evening wear he shows heels of colored stones.

The low-cut slipper is the smartest type in Paris and the cut is graded according to the occasion. In the afternoon the models are trim, cut out and they are comparatively simple, while for evening low cut-outs and elaborate ornamentation conforms to the latest dicta. Vamps shown, a very supple species of calf, in Perugia's newest leather conception, and it is decorated along futuristic lines.

SATIN-smooth and glossy—you feel as though you had bought it in Paris, this exquisite new soap for your personal use!

So fine-textured, firm and lasting—ah! Lux Toilet Form is made by the very method France uses for her finest toilet soaps. Made quite differently from the white soaps you are used to. A real "savon de toilette"—that was what women asked us to make.

"We want a soap as delicious as fine French soap, but oh, not so high-priced," they told us. "Surely you can make it—you made our miraculous Lux."

So we made this new different toilet soap! Made it as the finest French soaps are made. Bubbling ready lather the instant you touch it to water—hard water on the continent taught the French how! Lux Toilet Form leaves you with that delightful cared for feeling, that soft freshness, for which you used to pay absurd imported-soap prices! Intangible, but oh, so real! Somehow you feel lovelier just for using Lux Toilet Form.

Evanescent, delicious fragrance that a European perfume expert gave Lux Toilet Form—that illusive, half-sensed, half-dreamed sweetness that is irresistible! "Savon parfumé."

In its lavender and white wrapper, bewitching, immaculate, Lux Toilet Form is at your druggist's, your department store and your grocer's. Ten-cent stores have it, too. All the family may use it for both toilet and bath—it lasts and lasts like imported soap. 10c. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

Real Wealth

Wealth is having sufficient to keep body and soul together with the necessary health to enjoy life. It is earned, not by what we have, but by what we can do without. Love, honor, patience, vigor, cheer, and peace are the factors in the best wealth of human life. And there are cars for the asking. It matters neither where we live nor how humble our upbringing. If we possess these things. Though we may have no will, we shall pass on to the world a legacy unpremeditated.

Perfume Kept Strength

Most fascinating of all queer exhibits in the British museum is a brown substance contained in a large glass vase. A delightful fragrance, reminiscent of spices, filled the room when the lid of the vase was raised. Here is a cosmetic more than three thousand years old, taken from an Egyptian tomb, and which was probably a face cream once used by dusky ladies to enhance their beauty.

Junior Scales

Ruth was fond of music, and wished to take piano lessons, but her mother thought she was too young. "I might begin with junior scales," urged the little girl. "With what?" asked her mother, greatly perplexed. "Oh, junior scales," corrected Ruth. "Surely I am big enough to learn to play minor scales."

THE SMOKING OR TUXEDO MODEL IS ONE OF THE SENSATIONS OF THE SPRING, HERE AND ABROAD

The Easter parade threatens to be a long procession of women wearing suits which are directly inspired by their liege lords tuxedo and are known as smoking, a term used abroad for the tuxedo. Since their introduction into the feminine wardrobe they have scored a conspicuous success and everywhere one goes they see some version of this jaunty suit. Usually the coat and skirt are of contrasting materials, as for instance silk and kasha, but this is not a necessary detail. One must admit logically the coat in plain black while the narrow skirt may be striped, since there is a response to the compose suit as there is to compose frocks and hats, shoes, handbags and coats. The preferences for two materials for colors where one might serve is one of the salient features of a season which starts off with many, and diversified style interests.

Light weight English Woolen, Beige Cross-Barred in a Darker Tone, Fashions a Tailleur Which Is Bound in Dark Beige Braid. Large Flat Pleats Are Featured on the Skirt, and a Mannish Little Vest of White Pique Lends Added Chic to the Jacket.

It is refreshing again to be able to think of a suit as in two pieces, the old familiar skirt with jacket rather than as a three piece proposition, which has become generally known as an ensemble. Yet it is far from simplifying dressing since, a suit must invariably have the proper blouse, even an assortment of them. When once one has worked out an ensemble, that ends the matter, but what woman with a smart two piece tailleur was not forever in need of, and longing for a new blouse with which to wear it.

It seems of course that the black for a new blouse with which to tailleur would be bound to bring in the white blouse, for no matter how ravishing color may be, was anything ever quite as smart as black and white.

Longer Jumper Is Favored in Paris

Cape Theme Is Featured in Dresses and Coats; Two-Piece Frock Leads.

There is nothing sensational and nothing radically new revealed at the spring openings in Paris, asserts a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune. The silhouette, around which so much controversy has raged during recent seasons, is now a topic of tacit agreement. The eye-arresting hemline flare of last season seems to have been dispensed with, and in its place has come an outline which flares so gently as to be almost imperceptible, or which incorporates fullness throughout. Where last season individual designers sought to achieve distinction by the novelty of their flare treatments, this spring fabric and detail have come to be the means of differentiation.

The house of Goupy has placed its faith in the two-piece dress, developing these in fabrics of woven tolle squares so arranged as to creat both striped and border designs. The jumper is a prominent member of the Goupy opening, and it is considerably longer than last year's models. It invariably includes a narrow belt. Jumper skirts are full, invariably plaited, and the costume is often completed by a short tailored jacket. For evening wear metal fabrics, notably metallic laces, are prominent, and the return of the printed silk vogue is indicated in a wide range of sheer afternoon materials.

The two-piece frock is also the favored dress type of Yvonne Davidson, who exploits the full, straight silhouette achieved typically by the generous use of plaits. Color and fabric contrasts are also an attractive means of diversification in this collection—printed materials are combined with plain fabrics which harmonize with the basic tone of the print, and gray is prettily contrasted with both green and white. The cape idea is freely exploited in both coats and dresses. The tailleur is present, and in some versions is accompanied by a metallic overblouse.

The tailleur is generally shunted to one side by the always original Henriette Boudreaux, who offers as a substitute the tailored coat-dress developed along straight lines and in conservative colors and fabrics. Lingerie treatments at collar and cuffs relieve the monotone effect. On evening frocks lace is used in profusion, as are supple taffetas and chiffons.

Cape effects in coats and dresses, an unexpected predilection for black and the sponsoring of the out-and-out short sleeve for street frocks are the arresting features of the Magdeleine des Hayes spring models. Both printed silks and taffetas appear in this collection.

Two-Piece Silk Crepe Sports Frock for Spring

Showing a two-piece silk crepe sports frock with pocket, and fine plaits in the skirt. The sleeves are wide and open to the elbow, with two narrow streamers at the cuffs.

Scarf and Cape Hold Favor for Spring Mode

Whether the scarf, which has now become a necessary part of almost every type of dress, has inspired the cape, or vice versa, is not clear; but both are now established as the mode, and capes are all the rage. A cape is the most suitable, almost a necessary, wrap for the period opera and many attractive styles in capes are shown for both daytime and evening. In some of the handsomest models the cape matches the gown. In the new silks, crepes and chiffons they are beautiful. A chiffon cape makes a subtly welcome wrap over an evening gown of any material. Some of the most attractive in these are finely pleated. Satin, flat crepe, brocaded chiffon with the pattern in velvet repeated, taffeta and the soft silk of the glossy willow type, are used in the new cape models.

Why rub clothes threadbare

—when this new way soaks them whiter

NOW anyone can get the week's wash amazingly white and clean—without touching a washboard — without rubbing the life out of clothes and hands!

You just soak the clothes an hour or two in the morning—or overnight if you like—in Rinso suds. Then rinse—the dirt floats off—and the clothes are sweeter and cleaner than you could rub them! Even the most soiled parts need only a gentle rub between the fingers to make them snowy.

So safe for clothes

Rinso is a new kind of soap, granulated. It contains no acids, harsh chemicals or bleaches—nothing to injure white clothes or fast colors. No laundry soap is safer for clothes or easier on hands.

Use Rinso instead of bar soap, chips or powders. It's all you need, even in hard water. Just use enough to give creamy, lasting suds. Clothes washed in Rinso last longer, for there's no wear and tear rubbing against a board. You don't even need to boil the clothes, because Rinso soaking whitens better than boiling. Sterilizes, too!

Fine in washing machines

Rinso gives wonderful results in washing machines; recommended for safety, and for a whiter wash, by 23 washing machine makers.

Let Rinso do the wash this week! See how much work it saves you, how much whiter it gets the wash, how it spares your hands from becoming red and wash-worn. Ask your grocer for Rinso. Follow directions on package.

"Rinso certainly works wonders in making clothes clean and white. Even the most soiled pieces turn out snowy and fresh looking with almost no rubbing. I always used to be exhausted after wash day, but now I just let Rinso do the work for me. By soaking the clothes overnight I have scarcely anything to do in the morning except the rinsing. And it's so easy on my hands. They're never a bit rough or even red looking now. Rinso is a real blessing to me. I can't praise it enough."

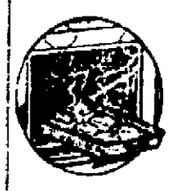
EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

Those who are fond of sweet potatoes will like this recipe:



Sugared Sweet Potatoes.—Select medium-sized sweet potatoes, pare and slice. Place these in a buttered dish—a casserole is best—add one and one half cupfuls of water (boiling hot) and sprinkle with one teaspoonful of salt and four tablespoonfuls of maple sugar; dot with bits of butter, using four tablespoonfuls. Bake 30 minutes and then set into a pan of hot water to wait for serving time.

Eggs in Spinach Nests.—Prepare six rounds of toast, butter well and cover each round with cooked and seasoned spinach, making a hollow in the center. Drop an egg into the hollow of each nest and place the dish in the oven until the eggs are cooked. Sprinkle with paprika, dot with butter and sprinkle with chopped ham.

Cheese Sandwich Filling.—Prepare a white sauce, using two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour and one-half cupful of milk. Put one-half of a can of pimentoes, two hard-cooked eggs, and one-half pound of cheese through the meat grinder; add one raw egg, one tablespoonful each of sugar and one teaspoonful of salt, with one-half cupful of vinegar. Cook over water until smooth and thick, after combining mixtures. Cool and use as sandwich filling for white bread.

Betrothal Sandwiches.—Cut white bread into one-fourth inch slices. Shape with a heart cutter, spread with pimento butter, put together in pairs, press edges lightly and decorate with small hearts cut from pimentoes, using the small vegetable cutter for this purpose.

Dynamite Blasts Open Ice Jams That Threaten Floods and Bridge Wrecks

DYNAMITE is being used successfully in many of the northern sections of the country to fight the ice jam menace which has been the result of cold weather. Solid masses of ice which threaten to carry away bridges and back up water thus causing immense damage were formed during the present winter in various places.

Dynamite experts have been called on to clear the ice away. This they do successfully by digging holes through the ice and putting bundles of dynamite sticks in the proper position below the ice. Dynamite is apparently the one agent which can be used successfully to avert damage in an emergency caused by a threatening ice jam.

Experts say that the best kind of dynamite for ice blasting is gelatin, because it is not injured by water and because it is heavy enough to sink. Varying quantities of dynamite are used in this work, the amounts running from fifty pounds to several hundred, according to the size of the jam.

Chronic Fatigue Keeps Many Mothers Always "Dead Tired"

Thousands of pale, tired, worn-out looking men and women are victims of chronic fatigue and do not know it.

Doctors say that the ordinary tired feeling, if it is an exhausted condition that "tempts us"—usually due to lack of sufficient exercise, puts us in the road, or overworking it is Nature's way to overcome it.

THIS TIRED condition runs from the blood, and in stomach and bowels from impure strength in two, and a strong back. Will not help you if your stomach like mineral iron. For sale at all good druggists.

NUXATED IRON

Potential World's Tennis Champion

Georges Carpentier (Right) Congratulating Lacoste.

Framed in the background of France's sensational though losing fight to topple America from the international tennis pinnacle, Rene Lacoste stands forth as a potential world's champion, if not already within the realm of consideration for the honor held so long by William T. Tilden.

Critics are of the opinion that Lacoste's straight-set victories over Tilden and Vincent Richards may be accepted as indicating that the twenty-two-year-old Wimbledon champion has earned a place as outstanding contender for international No. 1 ranking.

Victories Amazing.

Lacoste's victories over the No. 1 and No. 3 players were amazing in the ease and decisiveness with which he won, particularly in view of the fact that he never had played on the courts. It was believed that the strangeness of playing on the boards, together with the peculiar lighting conditions, would bother him.

Lacoste has gone back to the tennis of 15 and 20 years ago to build a foundation for his game. Although he has adopted the fast, American twist ball and although he makes occasional sallies to the forecourt, he has conquered mainly from the baseline, where such modern stars as Watson Washburn and Nathaniel W. Niles faltered within reach of national crowns.

The French star's offensive, the antithesis of that of his compatriot, Borotra, is almost colorless in its precision of stroke. Tilden with his curved ball service, Richards with his volleys, Johnston with his great forehand drive, Williams, Murray and McLoughlin with violent net assaults, swept all before them by the sheer power of their brilliant attacks.

Lacoste has sounded a note of defiance to the modern tennis trend. And in his cool, deliberate, almost effortless way, he has succeeded where success seemed almost beyond attainment.

Stribling Meets Slattery Tonight

New York, March 25.—It will be do or die a figurative death in the attempt for W. L. (Young) Stribling, of Atlanta, Ga., tonight. He will meet Jimmy Slattery, Buffalo light heavyweight, in a ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden and, if he intends to take his long-promised place among the heavyweight contenders, he must beat Slattery with convincing thoroughness. A mere hairline decision will not do.

Slattery, a sensation at this time last year, has been knocked out since by Dave Shade, a middleweight, and Paul Berlenbach and no longer is rated a serious contender for any title. Reports from Buffalo, however, indicate that Slattery is stepping at his old speed and may give Stribling a surprise.

But in spite of any change in conditions, Stribling will have to win almost as impressively as did Shade and Berlenbach or forfeit his standing as a heavyweight contender. A bout with Gene Tunney will be exhumed from its Miami grave, if Stribling shows to real advantage tonight.

He is an 8 to 5 favorite but these odds may shorten at gong-time, many having become convinced that Slattery is due for a come back. He got a close decision over Stribling in a previous meeting at six rounds two years when both were under the age limit.

ROOM FOR BIG MONEY IN BOWLING TOURNEY

Toledo, March 25.—Crack teams from Syracuse, Rochester, and several other cities will hold down the American Bowling Congress Tournament drives tonight in an attempt to wrest laurels and prize money from the polished drives and the hardwood.

From what happened last night there is much room for them to get in on the big money, for nary a team was able to crack among the leaders. In fact, but two teams were able to shoot in the 2800 division.

Cobb Will Equal Another Record in 1926 Season

One of the few outstanding records of major-league baseball which are not in the trophy room of Tyrus Raymond Cobb is almost within his grasp—the greatest number of years in baseball. The 22-year record of the late Adrian C. ("Pop") Anson will be equaled when the Georgia Peach steps out on the diamond this season. Anson was virtually benched after his 22 years in major-league baseball. Last year Cobb caught up with Honus Wagner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who completed 21 years in baseball before retiring. Cobb is now thirty-nine years old, but the lack of speed which brought about the retirement of Wagner and Anson is not indicated in Cobb's 1925 mark of 97 tallies for his team.

In batting Cobb's record excels that of Anson. In 21 years Cobb has gathered 3,823 hits in 10,859 times at bat, while Anson made 3,561 hits in 9,084 times at bat. Cobb's lifetime average being .369 to Anson's .339.

Uncle Robby in Need of Some Batting Support

Are the old boys there? See what Uncle Robby did and read your answer. In 1892 he made nine hits one June afternoon and the Baltimore Sun said:

"Robinson surpassed all previous records in batting this season. In the first game he came seven times to bat and made seven base hits, with a total of eight bases. In the second game he said his 'lamps' were a little tired and he made two hits out of five times up."

"How come?" Uncle Robby was asked the other day. "You were on nine times and scored only twice."

"Didn't have anybody to bat me in," came the answer.

Remarkable Record

Jerome Hinton, captain of the University of Kansas Rifle team, fired a score of 398 out of a possible 400 in the college match with the University of Missouri team. He fired 100 prone, 100 standing, 100 kneeling and 98 standing. His feat gives him the new indoor intercollegiate rifle-firing record.

"Have a Camel"

These words are first call to the world's finest smoke

THE choicest tobaccos grown are bought for Camel cigarettes. Millions of dollars are spent every year to insure their uniform quality.

No money is spared in the making of Camels. The tobacco is cured carefully and aged long. The exclusive Camel blend of fine Turkish and Domestic tobaccos is the work of experts. The paper in which Camels are rolled is specially made in France to obtain the best. Nothing is too good or too expensive that will make Camels a better smoke. Another good night, barring bloopers and a trifle of static. Even KDKA WHAS and WJBO were on tap, as they were Tuesday night.

Copied Jewish Chanters

Caruso is quoted as saying: "I have discovered that the Jewish chanters employ a peculiar method of intonation and vocalization in their service. They are unexcelled in the art of shifting the melody, of picking up a new key or modulating their ritualchant and of overcoming vocal difficulties that may occur in the words rather than in the melody itself. For this reason I visit Jewish synagogues whenever I have the opportunity."

As She Understood It

Dorothy, aged four, was told not to say "gee," as the word was slang. That night, when her father came home Dorothy ran to him, and said, "Daddy, I don't say 'gee' because it's slang." "It's what?" asked the puzzled father. "Slang," repeated the youngster. Seeing that her parent still did not understand, Dorothy went to the door, opened it, and then closed it with a bang. "There, like this," she explained.

TRY PSYCHOLOGY AS AID IN TEACHING DEAF TO READ

Scientist Reports That Visual Method Is Helpful in Learning Intangible Words.

Washington.—A new way of teaching the deaf to read in which the word symbols are learned by the deaf child by visual study, has been made practical by recent advances in psychology, according to Dr Arthur I Gates professor of educational psychology in Columbia university.

Doctor Gates has been attending the convention of school superintendents of the National Educational association here to present the results of recent tests before the educators.

"The main difficulty has been to convey to the deaf child the meaning of such words as 'when,' 'above,' 'these,' and 'but,' which are quite essential to ordinary reading," Doctor Gates explains. "These difficulties were previously considered by teachers of the deaf to be well-nigh insurmountable, but principles of learning now available from psychology suggest means of overcoming them.

"The underlying theory is that the deaf could be taught to understand words presented visually quite as readily and as fully as the normal child learns to understand words presented orally. There seems no reason to believe that it is harder fundamentally to associate meanings with visual symbols than with auditory signs."

The first test of this procedure is being made in the school of the New York Society for the Improvement of Instruction to the Deaf, with promising results.

That methods of teaching the deaf children to read are not fully adequate at present is shown by investigations made two years ago, Doctor Gates showed. It was found that deaf children, even those taught in first-rate institutions, are rarely able at the age of fifteen, or often later, to read ordinary prose readily enough for either information or enjoyment.

"Deaf children often suffer pitifully from loneliness," said Doctor Gates. "If they could be taught very early to read, their lives could be immeasurably enriched and enlightened."

Charges Women Bribe Policemen With Pie

Philadelphia.—Women who bribe policemen in Philadelphia with succulent pies and pastry to allow them to park their cars in "no parking" areas arouse only ire in the bosom of George W. Elliot, director of public safety.

That there are such feminine automobile drivers in the city is freely admitted by the public safety head. "According to actual record, we know that women go into pastry shops and emerge with fine fresh pies which they hand to policemen on the beat as a bribe to allow them to park where they shouldn't," says Director Elliot with a sigh of disgust.

The fact that these little scenes smack of the comic strip and the slapstick movie, however, doesn't make them a bit funny to the police head. For in these actions, and other petty briberies, which he says women are especially prone to, he sees more evidence of the subtle law evasion which he calls the most disturbing fact of American civilization today.

Cheap Nitrogen Sought by Utilizing Sea's Heat

New York.—The American Chemical society made public a proposal it received from German scientists to obtain atmospheric nitrogen with the aid of electric current produced by using the heat of sea water.

At the surface of the sea the temperature of sea water in the tropics and in portions of the temperate zone is at least 25 degrees, and at 200 or more meters depth is 10 degrees or below.

The Germans propose to evaporate carbon dioxide ammonia with the warm water, using the pressure obtained to run turbines and condense the gas with the cold water. The business possibilities would depend on the product of the energy obtained, as the location of the plants would be remote from industrial centers.

MRS STELLA MAHLSTEDT

Bought Hundred Dogs

The maharajah of Patiala, who is now on his way back to India, has created a record as a purchaser of dogs.

He bought nearly 100 Alsatian police dogs and English setters.

His other purchases have been almost as extensive. For a week before he left London his servants were busy packing them.

Calculation of Size of Statue of Apollo

The famous problem concerning the size of the colossal statue of Apollo on the island of Delos, which has worried so many savants, has finally been solved.

We are familiar with the Delos Apollo only in miniature, as represented on the Attic tetradrachm, an ancient Greek coin, where the god is shown holding the three Graces in his right hand.

At a recent meeting of the academy of inscriptions Theodore Reinach announced that he had calculated, with the aid of history as well as mathematics, the size of Apollo and the three Graces. This archaic colossus at Delos was the masterpiece, in gilded wood, of the sculptors Tectaeis and Angelion who flourished between 580 and 530 B. C.

The three Graces, which were not grouped, but separated and erect, here, respectively, the zither, the double flute and the pipes of Pan. They stood in the palm of Apollo's right hand. In his left hand he carried a bow. The colossus and its three statues were destroyed by fire.

With the assistance of a Delian inscription which mentioned the weight of the gold crowns designed for the god and the Graces, M. Reinach estimated the relative heights of the figures as eight meters for the Apollo and one meter eighty centimeters for each of the Graces.—From Le Figaro Hebdomadaire, Paris. Translated for the Kansas City Star.

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

At 21: John J. Carty Might Be Envied by Many Others of His Age.

"AT TWENTY-ONE I was with the Bell Telephone company of Boston, where I started two years before.

"I got this position when I was fired from a laboratory supply shop. In a fit of humor I coated several chunks of old brass with an acid preparation to make it look like gold. The proprietor of the store actually thought it was the precious metal and was wildly excited. Just as he was about to test the lumps I burst out laughing and gave the show away. He failed to share the joke with me.

"I went to the supe ntendent of the telephone company and he put me into the business I have been in ever since. The first time I tried to listen over the telephone in those early days I couldn't hear a thing. For a few moments the fear gripped me that I was going deaf. Later I did learn to hear, but there was so much noise on the lines that it was quite a trick to understand what was being said.—John J. Carty."

TODAY: Mr. Carty is one of the heads of the great American Telephone and Telegraph company, and is responsible for numerous inventions which have made telephoning possible.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

SLIPPING AWAY

NOW precious is this day which is yours to do with as you may elect—to waste in idleness or to dedicate to noble, enduring endeavor.

A day is but a brief space of time, yet it is about all we can with any degree of certainty call our own. No man is sure of the morrow, though millions of men count upon its coming with assurance, and plan to meet it without any visible doubt as to its arrival.

This day is yours. How are you spending it?

Are you filling it with ill-humor, ambiguous acts, unpardonable words, thoughtless or wasted time and opportunity?

If you are, you will regret it when the night comes, when your sun is gone down and you stand alone in the dark an unknown, without friends in a world which to your amazement has slipped away from you, leaving you benumbed and dazed.

There are no sympathetic ears to hear your cry, no loving hand to dry your tears.

Young men and women, and those in the meridian of life as well, who wish to be assured of their future should pack their kits with fine resolutions and make the best use of their time.

By following the straight road and keeping step with the faithful, when the shadows fall there will be no dread of loneliness, for there will come in the nighttime sweet dreams of a day well spent and the assurance of a brighter day in the dawning.

Fair Tennis Player Laughs at Warnings

That strenuous play in tennis tournaments is fatal to feminine beauty, is a warning usually given to good-looking girls who aspire to tennis honors. But Miss Eileen Bennet, who won the women's singles at the new Cromer club, London, England, shrugs her shoulders at the gloomy predictions of her friends and advisers. She is the prettiest of the first-class players in England and only eighteen. She has bobbed hair and the face and figure of a film star. Her tennis game is modeled on that of Mlle. Lenglen and there is every promise of her winning championships. She chooses to ignore the warnings of those who tell her that no regular woman tournament player has preserved her good looks for more than three or four years.

Senate Considers Italian War Debt

Washington, March 25.—With the whole field of America's foreign relations facing "pitiless publicity," the senate today began formal consideration of the $2,000,000,000 Italian War Debt settlement.

In opening the drive to ratify the pact, administration leaders predicted an early and favorable decision. To this, its foes replied that the settlement and the administration's whole international program would be "thoroughly aired" before a final vote is taken.

The debt debate, which Senator Smoot, (R), of Utah, opens this afternoon, probably will be as virulent and protracted as the world court fight. Whereas in that test of President Coolidge's international program, he was supported by the Democratic party in the senate, the administration will receive no such help in the debt fight. On the contrary, a majority of the Democrats may line themselves up with the belligerent irreconcilable group to oppose ratification of the pact.

The Democrats at least will father an attempt to recommit the settlement to the senate finance committee with instructions to "gather more information" about Italy's capacity to pay. This plan was proposed by Senator Robinson, of Arkansas minority floor leader, and met with endorsement from the irreconcilables.

HE WAS THE LOST DOG

By ARTHUR T. QUESTROM

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

I HUNG idly over the tramp freighter's rail on the side toward Puerto Barrios, and stared at the forsaken little town—a wretched cluster of thatched huts, for the most part, under a few stunted palms. The captain had gone ashore to settle up his business with the officers of the Guatemala Transportation company; the crew had scattered in the town, all but the man on deck-watch, who was busily whittling a boat out of a chip of mahogany. I, the passenger, the one avowed pleasure seeker on the Chincora, alone was bored to extinction.

Through the hot, lazy, moist summer sunshine, a man came sauntering toward me down the long pier—a "dead-beat" by every token—also, to my trained medical eye, a "rummy" past all common hope of redemption. His face was so swollen, so battered—his eyes so bleared under the still fine forehead and fair hair—his complexion so pimpled and revolting that it took all my experence of odds and ends of humanity to know him for a young man, with a year or two to the good before his thirties. He slouched as near me as the pier allowed, and accosted me huskily:

"For the love of Heaven, man, give me a cigarette! I must have it!"

For all his degredation, his voice wholly lacked the professional whine. I had a feeling that this was almost, if not actually, the first time he had begged. He stood facing me with horribly appealing eyes.

"See here," I temporized, "even if I weren't a doctor, I'd have the sense to see that in the state you're in, and on such a day, it wouldn't take many cigarettes to put you beyond the power to ask for one. Come aboard and let's have a look at you."

He came shuffling over the gangplank, hang-dog and hopeless in every inch; but still with that element of unfamiliarity with the situation that made me willing to do my best for him, to try, at the least, to ward off the craving until the safer, cooler night-time. Suddenly he spoke up:

"If you're no good for a cigarette, have you a piano?"

Under the carelessness of his tone, I caught a hint of urgency.

"Sure," I answered, "an old rattletrap the captain says he took at Belize, two or three trips ago, for a bad debt."

"It'll do," he insisted. "Let me at it!"

So I led him down out of the glare into the dark, stuffy cabin. He didn't wait to sit down at the instrument—just laid his hands on it as he stood and began to strike chords. I pushed the stool up behind him, and he hauled it into place with his foot, running his fingers over the keys all the time for dear life—then sat down and really started in. I am no musician, but I've heard most of the good music going, and well played at that—and I never heard better playing than there in the gloomy, old cabin of the Chincora—airs from all the operas I'd ever heard, Chopin, Beethoven, queer, out-of-the-way fantasies I'd never run across before, or since, for that matter—and clear out of the chaos again and again, blending into the rest and rising supreme out of them, the clean, pure strength of the "Pilgrim Chorus." Heavens! the soul the man threw into that thing! And the old, tuneless piano, with a note gone here and there, just sang it for him like another soul answering his.

"Once more with joy, oh, my dear home, I greet thee!"

Over and over again from the maddest medleys of "Wang" and Handel's "Largo" and coon songs he came back to it.

At the end of some three hours his hands dropped suddenly from the keyboard.

"I'm tired," he said. "You don't sail till the tide turns. Haven't you a corner where I could turn in and rest?"

As it happened, a spare bunk in my own stateroom was empty, and I took him there, rags, dirt and all, and told him to sleep it off. After a couple of hours I went to rouse him. It was getting on to sailing time, and I wanted a word with him before we left.

As he lay there asleep the boy in him looked out through the mask he had made of himself in a way that touched my pity; but even while I stared down, he opened his eyes, and in an instant woke to full recollection. A peculiarly sweet, whimsical smile flashed across his face.

"Thanks, doctor, I haven't had such a treat in years. It beats the Kind I tried to ask you for all to blazes!"

"Then the trouble's over?"

"Yes, for now," he answered. "The demon's locked under by the sheer power of song. "Queer, isn't it? But I'm grateful—gratefuller still if the reform'll hold good till I can beat it over to Belize and my next quarter's money."

"Next quarter's? Then you're—"

"You're bet it. I'm one of those poor devils of remittance men. Look here, you've treated me square. I'll tell you the truth, though you're under no obligation to believe it. Part in belief would be quite too much of a favor to ask. But—I'm the eldest son of a lord, don't know. Oh, you needn't bother to hide the grin. I'm not telling you the name. That's the family secret, not mine. They couldn't help my turning out black sheep. I was the whitest kind of a lamb till I struck Oxford, then I went wild. Remembering the history of some of my grandpapas on the maternal side, whom I much resemble, I'm inclined myself to say I 'reverted'—but the folks at home wouldn't stand for that."

"But even so," I objected, "why the extreme degree of down and out?"

"Why, because, don't you see, I've a decent younger brother, a good, square chap—a regular Den—I mean, a regular chip of my father's block. He's just out of Oxford now, and, I fancy, as clean as they make 'em. He's the sort to do the name credit—and to have kids worth putting on the family tree. Oh, the only thing for a plunk like me was to clear out and keep out! I draw my remittance every quarter—and it's big enough to live on like a gentleman, if I choose—and, incidentally, if I could keep my fingers on it more than four or five days all told. I'm out of the world, you understand, gone out—and pretty soon I'll be genteelly killed shooting big game in South America. Great stuff, that 'big game!' And Gerald'll come into the title and the estate, and all will be smooth sailing for the family honor. I tell you—" the levity suddenly dropped from him, and he met my eyes squarely, "the best thing a fellow who's got where I am can do, if he has a name and a standard to hold up in the world, is to hide, hide, hide, and crawl out of the back door of life as speedily as possible, and leave the job to those who can do it better. Good heavens! I haven't orated so since I was an undergraduate!"

He stretched himself and lounged out into the cabin. There was a newspaper on the table, and he picked it up, idly.

"The London Gazette! I haven't seen it in two years—or wanted to. Behold the power of song!"

He ran his eyes carelessly over it, page by page. Suddenly I saw him galvanized into attention. I heard his breath come fast. He bent closer and read the item again—and still more slowly again. Then he drew himself surprisingly erect and faced me a moment. Instinctively I knew that I myself was on trial. As if satisfied, he spoke out sharply, and with a new clip to his tone. "I'm going home—home—and I need your help. I believe—I know that I can trust you. Read this, please."

He thrust the paper into my hands with his dirty, nerve-shaken fingers. I skimmed the brief announcement of the marriage of one Gerald, son of an English peer, of a name renowned for generations, and a certain Rosie Ripley, a chorus girl. The tone of the paragraph was hardly complimentary to the future lord. There was a covert allusion to his wildness that could not be ignored; and the reference to the bride was not over-respectfully phrased.

As I looked up from it to my ragged tramp, he brought his foot sharply down on the cabin floor.

"Rosie Rip!" he growled. "Rosie! The confounded, young idiot! He might at least have had some originality. Whatever I am now I did escape marrying Rosie—though through no fault of hers. Fancy that ballet girl, with a dozen years' 'past' behind her, that worn-out bit of stage finery as a future peeress—and mother of some of us. Not while I live to step in between!

"Doctor," he went on, again meeting my eyes squarely, and again with a trace of that rare, whimsical smile, "I'm going to climb back into life. I'm a poor hulk, but thank God! I've the grace to know it, and to plan my world accordingly. If Gerald and I are both to revert to type, then confound the type! It's time to start a new one. I know the man who can set me straight—a doctor at home. He told me he could any time—if I honestly cared enough; but I never did till now. Will you see me through to Belize?"

Perhaps I was quixotic—for I had no proofs—and this all might be only a dirty scheme; but I yielded, eagerly, to a belief in him for what he called himself, and from sheer trust in the fellow, stood surety with the captain for his transportation to Belize. There, true enough, he found his remittance, and was quick to pay his debt and book his passage home.

And that is all the story, except that when in about two years the old peer died, the honorable Gerald, with his chorus-girl wife, did not succeed to the title. It was not so very long ago, either, and yesterday it came back vividly, when I saw in the London Gazette the account of a certain wedding among the ranks of the nobility. Both bride and groom, I noticed, were mentioned in terms of the sincerest respect.

Finback and "Killers"

Battle in Polar Seas

During one of Scott's antarctic cruises to study the finback whales, the rare appearance of which in the waters near the Falkland Islands threatened the existence of the islanders, one of his assistants witnessed a stirring battle between a 60-foot finback and a number of killer whales. The smaller species are armed with strong, sharp teeth, grow from 20 to 30 feet long and are exceedingly ferocious. They tear pieces of flesh a yard long from their larger adversary, attack its lips and enter its mouth, ripping out its tongue. The ocean's surface becomes red with blood after long stretches after such a conflict. The killer whale usually lives on smaller fish and remains around the mouths of rivers lying in wait for its prey, but occasionally is found miles out to sea, hunting and attacking the largest whales without fear. One scientist found parts of 13 dolphins and 14 other victims inside a killer 17 feet long.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Wine, Women and Song Again Cited

New York, March 25.—"Horse racing, wine, women and song, they were the ruination of my boy," said Richard Reese Whittemore, Sr., of Baltimore, father of the "Candy Kid," leader of a notorious night club gang, today.

The elder Whittemore asked to see his son immediately upon his arrival from Baltimore. The request was granted and the meeting between father and son took place in the district attorney's offices.

Young Whittemore displayed no trace of emotion at the meeting but the father almost collapsed, sobbing as his son spurned the paternal offers of aid.

The father, in broken tones, asked, "Can I do anything for you, son?"

"No replied Young Whittemore, curtly.

"Have you a lawyer " inquired his father.

"No and I don't want one," snapped the "Candy Kid."

Father, son and one detective were left alone in the room for a short period. After the conference, the Elder Whittemore said that he had advised his boy to make a clean breast of everything and not to hide any "fences."

District Attorney Banton said that Whittemore, Jr., would probably be turned over to Baltimore authorities on Monday.

UNWED MOTHER CHARGED WITH KILLING BABY

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 25—Mary Seigel, 18-year-old unwed mother, and John Mosco, 30, married to another woman two months ago, were to be turned over to the county coroner by detectives today in connection with the slaying of Miss Seigel's child shortly after birth.

Detectives, who discovered the infant's body buried on a knoll near the mother's home, said Miss Seigel admitted choking the babe to death. She accused Mosco of being the child's father, detectives said, and told them Mosco advised her to kill it.

The young mother was arrested on a charge of murder and Mosco was arrested as an accessory to murder.

Mrs. Helen Mosco, also 18, wife of the accused man, visited him in Allegheny County jail and swore her allegiance to him. She declared he was "framed."

SUCCESS NOT WHAT HE HAD IMAGINED

Seemingly Possible to Pay Too Much for It.

There once was a man who pegged along in an ordinary way, earning his bread and placidly enjoying his obscurity. He ate, worked and slept. That was the whole of his life, and so he might have continued to live if he had not read a go-getter article in one of the go-getter magazines.

Having read the article, he was filled with a great ambition to become a success and enjoy all the wonderful things that are reserved for successful men.

Success, of course, meant getting money; and money he got. The method of getting it was not unusual or spectacular; he simply made a better mousetrap.

When he had a million dollars in the bank and a mousetrap factory with seven acres of floor space, he leaned back in his swivel chair and said to his soul: "We are there. Now we shall begin to enjoy all those peculiar advantages that kind fortune bestows upon those who arrive."

That ends that part of the story. He really and truly was a success, according to all orthodox standards.

The remainder of the story has to do with the peculiar advantages he enjoyed.

He received 86,742 begging letters.

He was invited to head 631 subscription lists to raise funds for as many peculiar purposes.

His clipping bureau sent him an aggregate of nine columns a day; in seven-tenths of the clippings his name was spelled wrong.

Congress appointed a committee to investigate him.

He got an average of 32 invitations each week to quit his affairs and make talks to Kiwanis and Rotary clubs.

He helped a woman to her feet on a slippery walk and was sued by her husband, who demanded $50,000 for alienation of the woman's affections.

Federal agents filled with a zeal to "get" him for tax dodging prowled about his office.

When he got off a train, dead tired and irritable, 40 reporters wished to know what he thought of their town and he set his teeth hard and lied like a gentleman.

And at last, in desperation, he checked out his million and dumped it in the bay, burned his factory and got a job using a pick and shovel.—Baltimore Sun.

Carrying It Too Far

Judge Xenophon Hicks of Knoxville said in criticism of a foolish anti-vice crusade:

"These people carry the thing too far. They remind me of a contractor who was hired to build for a medical college a storage room where the cadavers, or corpses for dissection, could be kept.

"Well, when the dean of the college went to inspect the contractor's work he gave a start of surprise and said:

"'How is this, man? You've built two rooms for our cadavers. I only ordered one.'

"'I know you only ordered one, but I built two, of course, said the contractor stiffly. 'Decency, doctor, decency. The sexes must be kept apart.'"

So he was graduated from Girton college, Cambridge, and for many years was connected with the home office as principal women inspector of factories. She has held many offices which had to do with the study of child labor. Professor Soothill is professor of Chinese at Oxford and was for many years a missionary in China.

Amazing Growth Of Auto Industry

More Automobiles Used in U. S. Than Rest of World Combined—More Than Twenty Millions In Use on Highways Last Year.

Washington, March 25. An index of American prosperity, as well as evidence of the amazing growth of the automobile industry, was furnished today when government figures were produced showing there is one automobile for every 5.8 persons in the country.

More automobiles are in use in the United States than in all the rest of the world combined.

Estimates made public today by the Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Agriculture, show that more than 20,000,000 automobiles were in use on the highways of the nation last year. The total registration reported was 19,954,347, but there were in addition 96,929 state and federal government-owned vehicles not included in this figure.

The increase in registration during the year amounted to 2,360,670 or 13.4 per cent.

Truck registration increased 14.5 per cent for the entire country.

New York leads in total registrations with 1,625,583 last year.

The total revenue last year from registration fees, permits, etc., amounted to $260,619,621, of which $177,706,587 was made available for state highways, $19,124,014 for state road bonds and $48,396,471 for local roads.

The total motor vehicle registration by states, not tabulating official state and federal cars and eliminating so far as possible re-registrations and non-resident registrations, showed the following figures: Connecticut, 250,669; Maine, 140,499; Massachusetts, 646,153; New Hampshire, 81,498; New York, 1,625,583; Rhode Island, 101,756; Vermont, 69,576.

Smith Expected To Sign Tax Cuts

Albany, N. Y., March 25.—Governor Smith will sign the Phelps Bill, providing for a reduction of 25 per cent in the state income tax, and the Bouton Bill, increasing the state income tax exemptions to conform with the Federal law, within 48 hours.

This was learned today from sources close to the governor.

The Phelps Bill will mean a saving of upwards of $12,000,000 to income taxpayers. The Bouton Bill will benefit between 300,000 and 400,000 persons in the state. It will raise the exemptions for married men from $2,500 to $3,500 and for unmarried men from $1,000 to $1,500.

Both tax cuts bills were sponsored by Republicans but the 25 per cent measure was recommended by the governor in his annual message to the lawmakers.

Financial and Commercial

New York, March 25.—Industrial stocks were unable to maintain even the low range of values reached in Wednesday's collapse, and additional selling pressure today caused a fresh decline which established new low prices for scores of active stocks as well as a new low average for the year to date.

Baldwin Locomotive's crash to 97½, the first time since 1922 in which the stock has sold below par, and the decline of United States Steel to approximately its low price for the year was a signal for another heavy outpouring of stocks in every quarter of the speculative list. The outpouring of selling orders in Studebaker, White, Hudson and Chrysler was so large that values were swept away and new low prices recorded. Studebaker sold as low as 51⅝ for a new 3-point loss and White Motors broke through to 66.

There was no organized support worthy of the name in any of the leading speculative quarters. It was a case of "each one for himself" and stocks were compelled to find their own levels. Street rumors of heavy selling for the account of William C. Durant appeared simultaneously with the drop in prices of stocks in which Durant is director, including Independent Oil and Gas, Universal Pipe and American Safety Razor. The drop in Baldwin was also declared to be the result of Durant liquidation.

There were fewer reports of the calling of loans, but the renewal rate was placed at five per cent and continued at that rate. Business and industrial reports were unchanged.

LIMITED OFFERING

Ulster County Ice and Coal Corporation

CAPITALIZATION

$100,000	Preferred Stock
1250 Shares	No-par Common Stock

DEPOSITORY, Kingston Trust Company.

COUNSEL TO THE CORPORATION, John W. Eckert, Esq., Kingston, N. Y.

EXECUTIVE OFFICES OF THE CORPORATION Kingston, New York.

Organization.—ULSTER COUNTY ICE AND COAL CORPORATION, organized and incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, has a capitalization of $100,000 cumulative 7% preferred stock having a par value of One Hundred Dollars per share and 1,250 shares of common stock of no-par value.

The corporation's capital stock is full paid and non-assessable.

The preferred stock is redeemable at the option of the corporation any time after two years from date of issue at $110.00 per share and accrued dividends.

Business.—The corporation will specialize in the manufacture of artificial ice by improved, up-to-date methods and will also engage as wholesale and retail dealer in all grades of coal.

Plant and Equipment.—The plant of the corporation, 96x136, of brick, concrete and steel construction, located at 478 Albany avenue, Kingston New York, will be equipped with the most efficient machinery obtainable for the manufacture of sanitary or "HYGEIA" ice.

Artesian wells having a capacity of approximately 600 gallons of pure spring water per minute will furnish adequate supply for condensing purposes of the first unit, in addition to which connections with the City Water System of Kingston, give ample guarantee of the purity of the corporation's product from the view-point of health-protecting qualities.

Among the outstanding features of the equipment, attention may be directed to the planned installation of duplicate machinery or emergency installation to avoid the usual financial losses incidental to delays resulting from breakdowns in parts of the ice-producing unit.

Although provision has been made, in the construction of the plant, for two units, only one unit having a capacity of sixty tons daily will be maintained for immediate requirements; the second unit will be installed when the development of the corporation's business demands it.

In addition to the artificial ice-producing units provision has also been made in the plant for a store house having a capacity of 1,800 tons of ice.

The corporation's Engineers are also preparing plans for the construction of a refrigerating plant for cold storage purposes. Space in this plant will be rented to merchants, dealers, shippers and farmers for the preservation of perishable foods and farm products such as Eggs, Poultry, Fruits, etc. The operation of this plant should materially increase the corporation's income.

Plans have also been drawn for the construction of a brick building 20x150 for use as a garage.

The corporation's property comprising as it does seven acres of land, situated along the West Shore Railroad, is of great value for purposes of business expansion and its nearby railroad facilities assure maximum transportation results in the shipment of the corporation's products.

The land and building now owned by the corporation is conservatively appraised at $100,000.

After giving effect to this financing and the installation of equipment, the net assets of the corporation over all liabilities will be in excess of $150,000, or at least one and one-half times the total issue of preferred stock.

Earnings. Based on a minimum net profit of two dollars per ton, the corporation's sixty ton daily unit should earn One Hundred and Twenty Dollars per day (exclusive of Sundays) during the five months' warm season, and one-half capacity, or sixty dollars per day for balance of year, indicating earnings of $21,600 annually.

As it requires $7,000 per annum for dividends on the $100,000 preferred stock, there is apparently in sight $14,600 available for dividends on the no-par common stock, or over ten dollars per share on the total issue of 1,250 shares.

Estimates of earnings from the operation of the refrigerating plant, sale of coal, space in garage and other sources of revenue of the corporation are not included in the foregoing tabulation.

Account of sales of ice at retail which will show a profit in excess of two dollars per ton have also been omitted; likewise no mention is made of the possibility of the sale of the entire capacity output the year 'round.

Dividends.—The financial policy of the management calls for the payment of liberal dividends to stockholders when earned and available.

Dividends on the preferred stock being cumulative, no disbursements can be made on the no-par common stock until the full seven per cent on the preferred stock shall have been paid.

Available earnings in excess of seven per cent will be disbursed on the no-par common.

As the full equipment of the plant has not been installed, no definite dates can be mentioned for possible disbursements in the form of dividends prior to complete operations; nevertheless the management is confident that dividends on both preferred and common stock will be made quarterly, within a reasonable period.

Market for Product.—Hygeia or artificial ice manufactured from pure filtered water has been approved by scientists and medical practitioners the world over, as being far superior to the general run of natural ice gathered in rivers, lakes, ponds or streams, polluted by sewage and refuse of every description.

Impure ice when brought into the home brings with it disease, very often disastrous in its effects on the human system; many cases of typhoid and other fevers are directly traceable to the use of natural ice.

Ulster County Ice and Coal Corporation, manufacturing artificial ice of recognized purity, sanitary in every acceptation of the term, is assured of a demand equal to the capacity of the plant.

The plant of the corporation is very favorably situated, as there is no artificial ice plant south of Kingston, New York, to Weehawken, New Jersey, 90 miles, or north to Albany, New York, 66 miles, except on the east side of the Hudson River where there are two small plants.

Considered from a conservative angle, Ulster County Ice and Coal Corporation should enjoy what amounts to a practical monopoly of the urgent demand for Hygeia ice within a radius of 100 miles from Kingston.

Kingston alone with a resident population of approximately 30,000, immensely augmented during the vacation and touring season, together with the adjacent territory should provide a market for the entire onutput of the corporation's first unit, without giving any consideration to the surrounding countryside.

Personnel.—The officers and directors of the corporation are all well known in their respective communities.

They bring to the corporation the advantages which flow from active successful business experience.

Summary.—A necessity of life, with a world for its market is what the Ulster County Ice and Coal Corporation will manufacture and deal in, and in these days of enforced sanitation, it must be devoid of everything which savors of the existence of disease-breding germs, to be accepted in homes, hotels, and elsewhere.

Ulster County Ice, manufactured of pure Ulster County Water under the auspices of capable Ulster County specialists must be had for the benefit of all Ulster County and all Ulster County will have it if the Ulster County Ice and Coal Corporation can supply the demand now awaiting the start of active operation of its up-to-date plant.

The management of the corporation have carefully canvassed the situation; they know the immense demand and are anxious to supply it.

The officers and directors recommend the stock of the corporation as an investment of vast earning possibilities and liberal dividends.

Offering.—We offer for sale the unsold portion of 550 shares of preferred stock and 275 shares of no-par common stock in units of two shares of preferred, one share of common for Two Hundred and Twenty five Dollars per unit.

This offering is subject to prior sale, advance in price or withdrawal without notice.

All remittances should be made to the order of The Kingston Trust Company.

Proceeds from the sale of stock will be used for the purchase of equipment and purposes of the corporation's treasury.

Price: $225 Per Unit—2 Shares Preferred and 1 Share Common.

White motors slumped 6½ points to 66⅞. Hudson sold at 80, the year's lowest price for this stock. United States Steel sold down to 121.

Oils, railroads and coppers, however, held their ground.

Observance of Palm Sunday

Its Observance Has Place in Civilization's Calendar, Even Among Those Who Have No Religious Belief—Ancient Observance of the Day.

Palm Sunday, even among those who confess to no religious beliefs, has come to have a recognized place in the calendar of modern civilization. To all the world it graphically recalls the supreme crisis in the life of Him who, to a greater degree than any other in recorded time, profoundly influenced the whole course of succeeding history. As he entered Jerusalem on this fateful day eighteen centuries ago, astride of the humblest of all beasts of burden—symbolical of the meekness and simplicity of the doctrine which He preached—throngs which had already accepted His leadership, met Jesus of Nazareth and cast palm branches across his path, crying: "Hosannah to the Son of David! Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord!"

Thus Palm Sunday took its place in Christian annals. It marked the beginning of the end of His remarkable mission on earth; and was to lead, five days later, to the Tragedy of Golgotha.

With the day and its significance established, Palm Sunday has remained through the ages a fixed and recognized event, observed by Christian believers throughout the world according to their doctrinial forms.

Many quaint and interesting ceremonials have arisen in connection with Palm Sunday. Throughout history the palm has been to all peoples an emblem of joy and triumph. Its specific use by Christians in this connection is in token of victory over the flesh; so it was that when the Founder of the Christian religion rode into Jerusalem on the first Palm Sunday it was with the emblem of triumph, the plam, that He was joyfully greeted. Historians trace the observance of the day back to the Sixth Century. The Greek and other churches of the East observed it with great solemnity. With the spread of Christianity to the West, and particularly to the Latin countries, some of the rigid ceremonials gave way to more joyful observance, and the day became a floral festival second only to that of Easter. Among the Spanish it was known as Pasqua Florida. Spanish explorers having on Palm Sunday, 1512, discovered what is now the state of Florida, gave that name to the land in honor of the festival.

Mediaeval chronicles abound in references to the observance of Palm Sunday among the Armenians, Lithuanians, Serbs and Croats. In England it was called Olive or Branch Sunday, and the observance was characterized by a procession symbolical of the entry into Jerusalem, at the head of which was borne the figure of the Christ Child seated on an ass, quaintly carved in wood, the participants carrying palm and olive branches.

According to an ancient chronicle the faithful in Jerusalem were wont on each recurring Palm Sunday, after the customary exercises from cock crow to noon had taken place in the Anastasis and at the Cross, to go to the greater Church behind the Cross on Golgotha, called the Martyrium. Here the ordinary services were held. At the seventh hour—1 p. m.—all proceeded to the Mount of Olives, and to the cave in which the Lord used to teach, where for two hours hymns, anthems and lessons were recited. About the hour of noon—3 p. m.—all went, singing hymns, to the Imbomon, whence our Lord ascended into heaven. Here two hours were spent in devotional exercises, until about 5 o'clock, when the passage from the Gospel relating to how children carrying branches and palms met the Lord, saying, 'Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord,' was read, following which the procession dispersed amid shouts of 'Hosannah to the Son of David.'"

To this day somewhat similar services are conducted on Palm Sunday by the Christian congregations of the various denominations in the Holy City.

Palms blest on Palm Sunday and carried in the processions were later taken home by the faithful and used for devotional purposes. In the Christian churches where Ash Wednesday is observed at the beginning of the Lenten season, the ashes with which the sign of the cross is made upon the foreheads of the devout by the officiating priests, are secured from the burning of palm branches which were blest on the preceding Palm Sunday.

Mothers of Sickly Children Read This

My boy was run down—just about skin and bones, and no appetite, writes Mrs. Baker of Boston.

NOW STURDY AND STRONG.

"I am writing you in the hopes that other Mothers will read this voluntary testimonial regarding McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets. My boy, Emanuel, was run down completely, just about skin and bones; also irritable and with no appetite.

"I noted a wonderful improvement in him while taking your tablets and purchased three more boxes. His appetite picked up, and he is now sturdy and strong. A cheerful youngster and a happy mother want to thank you.

"You may print this at any time or anywhere you wish.

MRS. ALBERT E. BAKER,
"33 Ridgewood Street, Boston, Mass."

As a body builder, an appetite creator, and to make weak, skinny boys and girls sturdy, strong and full of energy there is nothing like Cod Liver Oil—any physician will tell you that.

But it's vile, horrible stuff to take and is apt to upset any stomach, so now doctors are prescribing, and wise parents are buying, McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—sugar coated, and as easy to take as candy.

Mothers, if any of your children are weak, thin or puny, give them these tablets, as directed for 30 days, and watch them gain flesh and health from day to day—they seldom fail—but if the unusual should happen and you are not satisfied with results—your druggist is authorized to return your money.

Be sure—always—to get the original and genuine McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—60 tablets 60 cents, at any druggists.

Agnosticism

Agnostics is a name given to philosophers who assert that we have no knowledge except that which we acquire by means of our senses. It is said that the word agnostic was introduced into our language by the late Professor Huxley, in the year 1869. It comes from the Greek, agnostos, professing ignorance.

Conversation

The secret of being agreeable in conversation has been described as being honorable to the ideas of others. There are people who evidently only half listen to you because they are considering, even while you speak, with what fine words, what wealth of wit, they will reply, and they begin to speak almost before your sentence has died upon your lips. These people may be brilliant, witty, dazzling, but never can they be agreeable. You do not love to talk to them. You feel that they are impatient for their turn to come, and that they have no hospitality toward your thoughts, none of that gentle friendliness which asks your idea and makes much of it.

1925 Champions Second Choices

Wall Street Names Athletics for American League Pennant—Pirates Rated Below the New York Giants.

By Davis J. Walsh.

New York, March 25.—If you fancy that the winning of a world's championship no later than October, 1925, automatically creates a pre race favorite in March 1926, you simply should come right in out of the rain this minute. It is not a question of being all wet, you are saturated—according to Wall street.

The Pittsburgh Pirates won the world's title five months ago and were very impressive about it, at that, but they are not as highly esteemed as the New York Giants for the 1926 National League pennant, according to a list of prices quoted the writer today by the Wall Street firm of J S Fried and Company.

The same quotations name the Philadelphia Athletics as a slight favorite for the American League pennant over the Washington Senators, who likewise happen to have won a championship in 1925. In other words, the street thinks it was all a terrible mistake.

Just how much it may be entitled to think it knows about the situation remains to be seen It is the so called thoroughfare of the "wise money" and is supposed to know everything about everything However, there seems to have been one rather unimportant exception It failed to obtain advance information on the Wall Street explosion.

Anyhow, it will quote you $7 against $5 that the Giants do not win in the National League and as much as $8 against $5 that the Pirates will finish out of the lead. Both are quoted as one to two shots to win, although why the Pirates should be rated with the Giants as a possible winner and below them as a possible loser is a bit beyond my conventional reach.

Equally mystifying is the fact that the St. Louis Cardinals and Cincinnati Reds, generally regarded as hot possibilities, are rated below the Brooklyn Dodgers. The street has set a price of 2½ to 1 on the Dodgers' head, for reasons not quite as clear as Brown's mixture.

Neither are the St. Louis Browns regarded as an appealing proposition in the American League, most of the money having gone down on the Athletics at 5 to 2 and the Senators at 5 to 3. The remainder of the fields in both leagues are held anywhere from 4-1 to 30-1, the Boston Red Sox and the Chicago Cubs rating the latter price without a play of any kind.

In naming the Pirates and Senators as second choices, the street apparently is playing a hunch plus the knowledge that precedent is somewhat against champions, even good one, in all the years since the modern world series was begun in 1903, no less than twelve out of twenty-one world's champions have failed to win the pennant in their own league the following year. And of the forty-four pennant winners between 1903 and 1924, twenty-seven have failed to repeat the next year.

However, I cannot seem to forget that the Pirates are supposed to be something of a ball club.

Stecher Will Defend Title.

New York, March 25—Joe Stecher, recognized here as the world's heavyweight wrestling champion, today notified Jack Curley that he will be willing to defend his championship against Joe Malcewicz, as suggested by the State Athletic Commission. Stecher recently declined to go through with a match with Malcewicz in Boston, leaving the ring when he claimed the promoter had not come forward with his guarantee.

Mayor Walker Returns Home.

New York, March 25.—Declaring that his vacation in Florida had improved his health greatly, Mayor James J. Walker reached home early today. He will go to Albany today to attend the annual stag dinner of the legislative correspondents.

Pohl Is Dissatisfied.

New Orleans, La., March 25.—"There isn't any secret about the fact that Lee Pohl is dissatisfied with the showing of Al Rosenthal, Dorchester favorite, who was the right field choice when the Red Sox training season opened."

Dodgers May Trade Hunter.

Clearwater, Fla., March 25.—With the Brooklyn Dodgers making ready to start north, a report was in circulation today that they might trade a pitcher to the St. Louis Cardinals for "Spec" Toporcer, utility infielder of the Cards.

HAGEN WON WEST COAST GOLF TOURNEY

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 25—Walter Hagen, who has been displaying some wonderful golf on the Florida courses this winter, today was winner of the west coast open tournament for the fourth time. Hagen closed the season by winning the Pasadena event with rounds of 70-73-69-71—283.

Hagen had to play great golf to nose out Bobby Jones, the national amateur champion, by two strokes. Hagen averaged 70¾ strokes, while Jones averaged 71¼ strokes per round.

Yankees Going Good.

St. Petersburgh, Fla., March 25.—With Huggins's pitchers going great guns, the New York Yankees expected to beat the Cincinnati Reds again today and make it four straight since they last lost a game to the Boston Braves. The team will break camp tomorrow and head for Waycross, Ga., where they will be joined by the Brooklyn Dodgers for a barnstorming trip north.

Braves Rest Today.

St Petersburg, Fla., March 25.—The Braves were awarded a vacation today after one brief practice session, as payment or something for their return to the victory trail. The defeat of the Cleveland Indians showed several encouraging and important things. With Gautreau back at second, there was more snap to the infield play.

Rosebuds Win Series.

New York, March 25.—Having taken the odd game of the intersectional hockey series with the New York Americans, 4 to 2, the Portland, Ore., Rosebuds today were ready to turn their faces toward Boston and a two-game series with the Bruins tomorrow and Saturday.

I told him why.
